FOOD'S FOLKS CORNER.

THE DRILL. Present arms! There they are. Born stretched out to me— Strong and sturdy, smooth and white, Fair as arbutus leaves.

The Little Pie.

A STORY FOR GIRLS.

Oh, just think of it! Grandma gave a party to all of us. She gave it at her country home, and we all went. There were ten of us. Kate and Emma and Jane, and Edward and Charlie and Ben, and Maria and Laura, and Tom and me—my name is Lilly.

We had the nicest time you ever saw. We played in the garden, and swung in the swing, and rode on the hobby-horse, and rowed in the boat, and we had such a nice chicken dinner, and peaches for dessert, and we took naps in the hammock, and put all our dolls in a row, we girls, all the boys inside fun of us. Then we played army and church, but grandmother said it might be wiser to play church, with Edward for the minister, with a white pocket-handkerchief pocket, and grand father's old spectacles on, up on the sideboard for a pulpit; so we stopped, and we played school; but Ben beat Charlie for not spelling catanumps right, and Charlie cried. Boys always break things up; and then we went into the barn and rolled down the hay; and at last grandma called us all into the house, and said that she had baked us all a little pie, but there was a nit-table, and all the pies were different sizes.

"So I shouldn't be partial," she said. "You can help yourselves, but you must not begin to eat until I give you leave." We all kept still while grandma was speaking. Then as she sat laughing in the rocking chair, and grandma, laughing, too, stood near the table, Ben talked out: "I'm the biggest. I ought to have the biggest pie."

"Great oodion," muttered Edward, but Ben grabbed the biggest pie of the whole lot and walked off with it. Edward and Charlie almost fought for the next, but Edward got it, and Maria said Tom was meant to try for such a big one, and Kate cried, and Emma pinched Jane, and no one would touch the tiny little pie until grandma said: "I'm sorry that pie is so small. I'm afraid it will cause contention."

Then I thought how kind grandma had been, and I said: "I'll take the tiny pie. I like tiny pies just as well as big ones. I think we ought to be ashamed to fight over treats. Ornaments will be different sizes, I expect, and grandma loves us all."

"You'll find it as good inside as any of them," said grandma. But oh! what a time there was with Kate and Emma; and Jane, and Edward, and Charlie, and Ben, and Maria, and Laura, and Tom—all choosing the best and biggest; and grandma laughing so about it.

But just think! When grandma saw we had all taken our pies, she said: "Now I'll tell you something. These pies are to be opened before they are eaten; not bitten into. Ben, be careful."

So we did as she told us, and all in a moment the crust was gone. It crumbled to pieces in our fingers. And we saw it was only meant to hide a paper, with something in it. Ben had a paper of candies in his; and Emma had a blue pin cushion; and there was a little glass box; and a china dog and a tiny doll in Kate's; and Emma's and Maria's, and Laura's, and Jane's; and Edward and Charlie and Tom had all such pretty things that it was half afraid to open my tiny warty pie. But when I did, what did I find there! Oh, just think! It was as true as true can be! A little silver watch that would go, with a chain made out of grandma and grandpa's hair.

"Oh, I am so glad I took the little pie!" said I. Then I was sorry for the other, and stopped. But grandma said: "My dear child! I wanted the watch to be in the little pie, to show all our little ones that grubbing for the best and biggest does not always pay; and that if we take some little thing that falls to our share contentedly, we often find ourselves very happy with it." Then everybody understood, and grandma got us four or six with plenty of milk, and peach short cake; and grand father took us home in the wagon, and all the way along the road we sang pretty hymns, and we all kissed each other at parting.

Holloway's Pills.—Nothing preserves the health so well as these alterative Pills in changeable weather, or when our nervous systems are irritable. They act admirably on the stomach, liver, and kidneys; and to thoroughly purify the blood, that they are the most efficient remedy for warding off derangements of the stomach, fever, dysentery, and other maladies, and giving tone and energy to enervated constitutions. All who have the natural and laudable desire of maintaining their own and their family's health, cannot do better than resort to Holloway's Pills, which regulate, and strengthen. These purifying Pills are suitable for all ages, seasons, climates, and constitutions, when all other means fail, and are the female's best friend.

A COLLAPSE OF VITAL ENERGY in lung disease is greatly accelerated by the loss of flesh, strength and appetite, which necessarily attend it. It is one of the chief recommendations of Northrop & Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, that by reason of the blood-enriching and nourishing properties of the latter, and the stimulating effect of the former, strength is compensated for losses already sustained, while a healing and soothing influence is at the same time exerted upon the inflamed membranes lining the throat, lungs and bronchus, by the Cod Liver Oil. Digestion is stimulated and appetite improved; the nervous system acquires tone and vigor, and the secretions undergo a healthy change when it is used. Purchasers should see that the bottles (sold at 50 cents and $1.00) have the firm's name blown in them, and that the wrappers bear a fac simile of our signature. Sold by all Druggists. Prepared only by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto.
