

The Free Press.

THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 8, 1882.

All lovers of temperance must rejoice to know the stand the movement is taking. Even in London it is no longer fashionable to have liquor delivered at private houses publicly. In proof of this, in bygone years, it was the custom to have the quarter keg driven up in daylight and with a good deal of lurch. Now, however, the fashion is to deliver the keg quietly just before daylight—Advertiser.

Bathing.

Complaints are made by citizens, of the nuisance and indecency of boys bathing at open places on the ponds and streams in this vicinity. No doubt the exposure of naked limbs is very disgusting to refined sensibilities. But bath ing in hot weather like the present is a necessity and should be encouraged instead of being condemned. Those who do not like to see the boys as usual would look in some other direction. Let the boys swim, we say, so long as they do not trespass upon forbidden premises. It is a healthy invigorating exercise. But if super sensitive persons will hunt out their retreats to censure upon them, perhaps a bathing place could be set apart where those who desire to enjoy a dip may do so in peace, under proper regulations.

The Harvest in America.

Great expectations have been formed of the harvest in the United States. Much of the wheat crop has already been gathered, and all is expected to be secured in fine condition. It is confidently predicted that the crop will amount to 800,000,000 bushels, the greatest in the history of the country. As it requires but 250,000,000 to feed the home population and cover next year's crop, half of this year's product will be available for export. In 1880 England imported 67,500,000 bushels of American wheat, her annual requirements being 200,000,000 bushels, 83,500,000 of which she raises herself in an average year. It may trouble our neighbors to find a satisfactory market for such a vast surplus of wheat as 250,000,000 bushels. Besides wheat, the barley and oat crops are reported almost safe. Their growth has been luxuriant, and the heads of those grains are well developed. The hay crop is also safe. The same may be said of the crops in Canada, so that the condition of the agricultural class on this continent is particularly bright and happy this year.—Ottawa Free Press.

The Scott Act.

We hear many complaints against the Scott Act because efforts are being made to enforce the law. Do these fault-finders claim to be law-abiding citizens? If so their sympathies will be found to be on the side of law. If their sympathies are not on that side then they are not law-abiding citizens. Nothing can be clearer than this, for "he that is not with the law is against it." This is not the time to plead that because the law is unjust and oppressive it should not be administered. Such teaching would soon create a contempt for all law, and render the safety of business, social, moral and religious interests extremely hazardous, and the end would be anarchy and rebellion. If the hotel keepers, or those opposed to the Scott Act think the law is unjust, instead of breaking it and bringing it into contempt, they should proceed in a legitimate way to secure its abrogation or repeal. Then no one can complain, but the attempt to create an adverse sentiment to a law by breaking it, can have only one effect, viz—the awakening of an indignant popular feeling against the law-breakers.

Now what more sensible course can hotel keepers pursue during the three years in which the law will be in force than to strictly observe the law, and at the expiration of the term have a vote taken upon the question of repeal? In doing so they will at least win the admiration of other law-abiding citizens, and accomplish their object much more readily than by pursuing an opposite course. Some are doubtless observing the law, but it is quite evident that others are not, and if the penalties of the broken law are inflicted upon the latter, whose fault is it?—Million News.

The Governor of Kansas says:—Not only does prohibition prohibit in Kansas, but it tends also to increase the material wealth and prosperity of the state.

Acton Village Council.

The village council met on Tuesday evening, 1st inst. Members all present but Mr. Spright. Mr. C. S. Smith, Reeve, in the chair. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The committee on Finance presented their eleventh report recommending payment of the following accounts:—
J. B. Pearson, Nails, $8.00
C. T. Hill, 4.35
Wheeler Barabaw, work on streets, 3.75
David Bell, 3.00
Wm. Watson, 2.50
Henry Bell, 1.50
David Smith, 1.25
J. E. McGarvin, material for street 75
$26.10

Moved by Mr. D. D. Christie, seconded by Mr. P. Jarvis, that the report of the Finance Committee be adopted.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. D. D. Christie, seconded by Mr. D. W. Campbell, that Mr. Mellory, Architect, be paid the sum of thirty dollars.—Carried.

On motion the council adjourned.

Grist Mill Burned.

Friday evening, about seven o'clock, the large four-story flouring mill, owned and worked by Farnsworth & McKim, Palmerston, took fire shortly after the employees had left work. The building being frame, nothing could be done to put on the fire. About thirty barrels of flour was all that could be saved. The total loss is supposed to be about $18,000, and the insurance between $6,000 and $10,000.—Guelph Mercury.

The Egyptian War.

The trouble in Egypt continues, but the developments of the past week have been few and of little importance. The state of Alexandria, however, is causing serious disquiet. The natives who remain are incendiaries, and the majority of those who have returned are looters looking after concealed plunder. It is impossible to mistake the bitterly hostile attitude of this class and of the native police. The situation yesterday was alarming. Large bodies of Bedouins are forming for the apparent purpose of surrounding the city.

Further Repairs Required.

DEAR SIR:—Please insert the following: "It would be well if the street and sidewalk committee of this village would give the crossing at the corner of Mill and Willow streets a little attention. The other day a young lady tripped on one of the broken planks, and fell, almost breaking her arm. At another time a little boy coming along, carrying a box of biscuits and a piece of cheese, was laid prostrate by the same plank, and falling upon his biscuits burst the box, and landed the cheese in the mud. If a serious accident should occur it might cost the corporation more than the laying of a few planks."

Lord Cavendish's Assassin.

A telegram to the Mail says the assassin of Lord Cavendish, who was arrested at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, gives his name as William Westgate. He was arrested on the 16th inst., on his own confession. He shipped on the 8th of May under the name of O'Brien on the British barque Gladstone from Swazee to Toronto. He says he left Dublin on the night of the 6th of May by steamer to Swazee. The names of three of his accomplices and other details of the murders were taken by deposition before the consul. He says that he was employed by Mr. O'Connor and other influential persons. Parties who have seen the man give credence to his confession. In appearance the man is tall and slender. He says the price of the deed was twenty pounds to each of the assassins. He said that twenty pounds was worth more to an Irishman than an Englishman's life. It is believed that the Venezuelan Government will surrender him, although there is no extradition treaty. The British Foreign Office has been telegraphically communicated with.

Popular Sayings.

The philosopher who said that "There is wisdom in silence," should have added, "When speech would be fully." Had he done so we should have concurred with him. But, as a rule, silence is no proof of wisdom, although it may be proof of gentleness or modesty. What would have been the condition of the world to-day if all the great minds of the past had strictly observed the so-called golden rule? What would have become of all the great inventions and improvements in arts and sciences, which have now our admiration, and conferred priceless benefits on this and all future time, if they had not been made public? Happily for us, the philosopher's dictum is reversed. The world has long since decided that "there is wisdom in speech," and accepting that decision, the great minds of the age are scattering far and wide treasures of knowledge with profuse liberality. Second to none in this respect is Professor Holloway, who will ever be linked with the prominent men and events of this wonderful century as much for the valuable remedies he has given us, as for the indomitable pluck and perseverance which enabled him to triumph over difficulties under which men gifted with those qualities in a lesser degree would have sunk.

It became apparent to him at the outset of his career that the wider the sphere of usefulness, the greater the amount of good capable of being done, and keeping this ever before him, he has exhibited to the astonished world success without a parallel, aided by publicity which extends over the wide earth; for there is scarcely a public organ in any part of it in which Holloway's advertisements will not be found. When we state that those advertisements cost something like £50,000 a year, we do so with considerable diffidence from a feeling, that the statement will not meet with general credence, and yet nothing can be more true. This being admitted, let imagination for a moment or so indulge in contemplation of vast sums of transactions which not only justify but render commonplace an outlay, in a single direction, necessary to preserve their magnitude. But when that will have been accomplished, extend imagination will fall to convey anything like an approximate idea of the benefits they confer on myriads of those whom curatives were scarcely known, and who, without them, would, like their ancestors, have lived and died in agony. From that mass, who have benefited by these medicines, the cry of thankfulness pours forth in a continual strain, and Holloway's Pills and Ointment have made for themselves a name and a home everywhere.—The Freeman.
