THURSDAY MORNING ACC. 9, 1883.

Left Alone.

As the village bell pealed forth the hou of biz. on Tuesday morning, we were wend ing our way to the FREE PRESS officeour daily place of duty. As we entered the door we were not greeted by the usus bright smile and pleasant "good morning. On the contrary, the editorial chair was speant, and things in general presented a rather gloomy aspect, and the thought struck us forcibly that something unusual had evidently taken place. As we gazed around in silence our eyes fell upon the following placard :- " Gone off for a week's holidays. Do the best you can and every thing will no doubt come out right in the end." We did not have to take a seconglance to decide that it was from the pen of the all-familiar hand of the editor him self. We drew one long sigh. Could it be possible, or was it only a practical joke However, we took it for granted that he had only gone off on a fishing excursion and would probably be back again in the evening, but our suppositions were indeed false, for in the course of an hour we were authoritively informed that he had really gone, and for a whole week. By this time our nervous system was pretty badly shaken. : What was to be done? It would never do to suspend publication for a week. Presently a bright thought came over us. We had often read about the editor and his scissors. 'Oh, for a pair of scissors! as a pair of scissors had never been within the sanctum door, for nowhere could they be found. It was now too late to think of hunting up an editor who could do himself and the paper justice in so short a time. Just at this moment a worthy scribe entered the door, said he was looking for a job, and told quite a pitiful story. We at once explained our case to him, and his eves brightened as we spoke; so we set him to work, thinking we would have an easy time of it after all. He had hardly got settled down to business before he inquired for ed. He was not the person wanted, so we story comes fast upon its footsteps.

The Halton Appointment is Legal.

If this charge were well found- | following accounts, viz. ed as we said in a previous issue, it would Luther Lyman, salary for lighting be unfortunate for the temperance people and their hope of a successful enforcement | H. P. Moore, printing Voters' List, of the Scott Act during its second year of J. B. Pearson. Hardware, &c., operation. On studying the Crooks Act Jas. Stephens, work of streets, his contention that the Government has no power to appoint a second license inspector for a county; but this is no exuse for alarm ! on the part of temperance people in regard | Committee, just read, be adopted. - Carto Halton. The Glow was scarcely accurate in the terms of its semi-official announcement, and consequently misled the public. The matter is easily explained. Clause 92 of the Crooks Act provides that "the Lieutenant-Governor may appoint " one or more provincial officers whose duty "it shall be to enforce the provisions "this Act; and especially for the preven-"tion of traffic in liquor by unlicensed "houses." Mr. Black was appointed as a provincial officer under power of this clause, and instead of his duties being confined to the northern part of Halton, as the To Miss Campron,-Globe announced, he is empowered to go not only into the northern part of Halton but into other counties as well. The old inspector. Mr. Frazer, can enforce the Crooks Act in the northern part of Halton as usual, but he is advised that it would facilitate the enforcement of the law if he devoted his whole energies to the southern part of the county, while Mr. Black has been directed to specially watch the northeru townships and towns. There are no licensed houses in Halton, and as the Crooks Act says these provincial officers shall be "especially for the prevention of traffic in liquor by unlicensed houses,' Mr. Black's appointment and this understanding as to an unofficial division of territory will be peculiarly appropriate .-

The Home Paper.

Hamilton Tribune.

The local paper has more power than is generally accredited to it, and in proof of this we present the following paragraph penned by Mr. Geo. Peck, of Milwaukee, a gentleman of experience on this question, who in referring to the county Journalist and his productions says :- "When we think of the hard drudgery that these enterprising, indefatigable workers do in a week, and the small amount of thanks and cash they receive in return, we feel as though something was wrong somewhere. Why is are quite as fully apreciated at home as it that in many localities the people do not appreciate the importance of a good newspaper, and sustain it by a liberal patronage, thus making it a better paper, is one of the most unaccountable things in the world We have no urgent call now to say what we do; but we tell people in every locality where a paper is published, no matter how small and insignificant the paper may be, dollars in eash in their pockets. We have figured on it and we know. It may not look so in the face, but it is very deceiving. Lots of schemes that look as though they had millions in them, like the man who is sure he can pick the right card in three months, fail to return anything like millions, while other schemes that do not appear to amount to anything scarcely. pan out handfuls of nickels nuexpectedly. And the country newspaper is one of this class. Subscribe for your paper, and pay for it in advance, and if you feel at the end the year that you haven't got your money's worth, then your fortune is made. You can go to a museum and get $5,000 a year as a curiosity.

Canada's Dairy Products.

The following from the New York Observer is but one of the many lines in which we excel the Yankees, population considered : "Canada has become more emphatically a dairy country than the United States, With a population of 5,000,000, the Canadians manufacture autually 60,000,000 lb. of cheeses, equal to 14 pounds per capita, while we, with 50,000,000 people, make $00,000,000, or 6 pounds per capita. With a population not exceeding onetenth of ours, their exports of butter are about onehalf as great as ours.

The following is the address and substance :-Upon me devolves the duty of expressing to you the feelings of the choir on this oc which you have played has been of great You have not only been regular at the services, but you have been regular at the practices, and your musical taste, together with your musical enthusiasm, have helped to keep alive a lasting interest in the duties of the choir. There are two outside facts which have increased the value of your services. The one is that you joined the choir at its early, and therefore its critical, period. It was then an open question wheth-er success or failure would be the result.

You have helped to answer that question, and the present flourishing state of the choir is no doubt due, to a great degree, to your keen and lively interest in its matters. The other is that although you belong to another sect, you gladly threw in your lot with us, this implying somewhat of a sacrifice, as it is natural for everybody to worship with those of their own faith. In view of these facts the choir have selected this occasion to express their appreciation of your services, and that this appreciation should take a tangible form, present you with this Card Case (which was a beautiful pearl one, on which the following inscription was engraved, in silver: "To E. (from the choir of St. Paul's Church, Walk erton,") and Ladies Companion, which, al-though a small token of their regard, will nevertheless be frequently in your hands, and will therefore frequently remind you of your short, yet useful, visit to Walkerton, and the many pleasant evenings which you passed with the choir. Miss Cameron, taken by complete surprise, asked Mr. Smith to convey her thanks to the ladies and members of the choir. The above refers to Miss Eliza Cameron, of this village, whose services in the church abroad, and the choir of St Alban's Church gladly welcome Miss Cameron home again,
