Terrestar Monning Jan. 8 1884. Christmas Cheer.

There are men who imagine that having jolly Christmas means getting drunk.

At any rate they get drunk. Fool drunk.

Sick drunk.

Disgustingly drunk. Beastly drunk. Doad Drunk.

Men, ordinarily sober, do this sort of thing at Christmas and New Year's time. Men, whose nives will weep bitter tears when gladness is supposed to rule the earth. Men, whose sons and daughters will blush when they see their father's drunken stagger and idiotic stupor, do this sort of

when they see the drunken wreck, do this

Youths and young men go home with flushed faces, unsteady gait, and foul breath, to break their mother's heart and bow their father's head with sorrow, at Christmas time. Plenty of them are at it to-day, have been at it for days, and will stick to it for week. And they call it Christmas cheer.

Christmas cheer ? Christmas beart-break.

Christmas ruin. Drinks and jollity in the saloon-woe and desolation at home. Songs and mirth over the hot-whiskies and Tom-and-Jerries sobs and tears over the cradle and round the hearthstone

And this is Christmas cheer? Young man, old man, take your grog and your companions home with you.

Drink, and smoke, and sing your songs, and watch the faces of your wife, your mother, your children-if you have anywhile you pour out the whiskey and then get drank if you can.

Hear the youngsters whisper "Papa's getting drunk !"

as you try to stand up and propose a toast tozerbovs," See the shame you cause by the rudeness of your associates, and keep it up till family rises in crimson disgust to go and weep alone. If drunkenness and debauchery com under the heading of Christmas cheer take it home with you. If you are ashamed to let your family see such things you ought to be ashamed to'do them. There are other pictures—pictures of-Acton, Nov. 12th, 1888. In a hurried review of the "Buried Cities Recovered." I have found it a volume written in a clear, graphical style, beautifully illustrated, and replete with descriptions of the latest discoveries in the Rol-Land. The work is written by Rev. F. S. DeHess, D.D., for many years American Consul at Palestine, and this fact itself should be a satisfactory guarantee for the excellence of the volume. To the biblical student and those who take pleasure in biblical subjects, the work will afford valuable aid, and cannot but yield a large field of intellectual argument to the cultured reader, and taken as a whole it is eminentfitted to stimulate the study of the inspired record. The book is tastefully gotten up, with full legible type, heavy paper, good binding, and beautiful maps and engravings. With interesting and soulstirring information the book is worthy of
