THURSDAY MORNING, AUG. 14, 1884.

THE RULES OF HEALTH.

A correspondent of the St. James Gazette suggests that the way to guard against cholera is to avoid worry and live as well as possible.

Listen to each simple rule.
As to conduct and diet:
You must keep severely cool.
Though the cholera can riot.
Eat the best of all things good.
Never a dish that is very nice.
Hate you, while it's understood
You avoid too many loaves.

You may eat all sorts of fish.
But you may not talk gammon;
But a prudent man won't wish
Too much to remember with salmon.

Fruit is yours to eat;
Every dish a wholesome comest;
But the chops of pork are meat.
That you need not try in summer.

Fruit is welcome, too, I trust.
When not over-ripe; at present,
Blackberries and cream you'll love
Will be found extremely pleasant.

Keep yourself from worries free;
If you're lazzaroni, you must gain 'em;
Thus quite easily, you see,
You'll preserve the corpse serene.

Abernethian Anecdotes.

A gouty old squire once called on Dr. Abernethy for advice, and told him of all his ailments, of course.

"How do you live?" abruptly asked the doctor.

"Very abstemiously," answered the patient.

"Be good enough to particularize, sir."

"Breakfast at ten, luncheon at one, dinner at six, and tea at nine; meat at every meal, and a bottle of two of old port to whittle away the afternoon."

"What makes you drink wine?" inquired the medical man.

"Oh, because I think it does me good."

"It's a lie, sir; it's because you like it."

Dr. Abernethy was once waited upon by an old gentleman who had impaired his digestion by eating and drinking. He inquired into his mode of living, and heard that he drank so much spirits before he got up in the morning, and so much in the daytime, after which the doctor said he could not see him again without a year's attention to diet regimen.

"What," said the man, "are you a great doctor?"

"I thought I had only to come to you and you would give me some physic to take which would see me right directly."

"You rascal!" said Abernethy, "do you go burning your bowels out for years and then come to me to set you right in a minute?"

The Collection Plate.

"Uncle Remus, what come o' yo' last Sunday? I didn't see yo' to church."

"I was dar, Sam! I passed de church."

"Oh, dat 'ponies fo' no seein' yo'. You see dat's been so much beggin' goin' on ob late, dat a man's gutter go down putty deep in de bottom of my pocket, bringin' me collection when yo' kin along, an' course I couldn't see yo' from dar."

The above reminds the editor of the Prose Farmer of an incident in one of the down east churches, which he was acquainted with. A pretty regular attendant always had his eyes closed when the collection box was passed, either asleep or pretending to be. The good deacon finally became a little out of patience, as the man was in good circumstances and abundantly able to bear a share in the expenses of keeping the church warmed and lighted. Finally, reaching out the box, he nudged the sleeper, and quietly remarked in a loud whisper, "Please wake up and pay your lodging!"

Politeness in Church.

The St. George's Church Parochial Magazine for August has the following: As a rule the St. George's congregation are attentive to strangers, but it will do them no harm to read the extract beneath from a church paper published in the States:

"An evil, common in many parishes and damaging to parish growth, is the neglect of regular worshippers to show due courtesy to all who come to church, and especially to strangers. There are some who mistakenly suppose that this duty devolves upon the vestrymen and usher alone—it belongs to every parishioner. As in private life we are pleased with that graceful hospitality which prompts our host to meet us at the door with a cordial shake of the hand, so also, when we are strangers in a city, we are impressed with that Christian courtesy which meets us at the church entrance with a hearty welcome, assigns us a comfortable seat, makes us feel at home, and invites us to come again."—Geoph Herald.

Little Mary's Question.

A good story is told of the Bishop of Atlanta, Georgia. He recently addressed a large assembly of Sunday School children, and wound up by asking in a very paternal and condescending way: "And now, is there a-a-n-y little boy or a-a-n-y little girl who would like to ask me a question?"

After a pause he repeated the question: "Is there a-a-n-y little boy or a-a-n-y little girl who would like to ask me a question?"

A little child came out and said: "Please, sir, why did the angels walk up and down Jacob's ladder when they had wings?"

"Oh, ah, yes—I see," said the bishop; "and now is there a-a-n-y little boy or a-a-n-y little girl who would like to answer little Mary's question?"
