That Home of Ours.

In these days of low prices, when a pretty print or muslin dress can be bought for five or eight cents a yard, cambric and sattens in choice colors for fifteen cents, or cotten and wool fabrics for suits at twenty-five cents, there is little reason why a lady should not be prettily dressed when about her work at home. If the warm, damp weather takes the curis all out of her finzes, a few moments should be employed after the family are scattered to put them up again. A little more trouble and expence will more than pay, if the little children are overheard to say, "Doesn't mother look sweet ?" Boys, especially -re very early influenced by the surroundings of home. Happily the old custom of having a "best room" shut up, except for wed dings, funerals, or occasional company, is fast being abandoned. Now the home rooms are all thrown open. Sunbeams are welcomed, for it has been found, that it is a choice between them and malaria, or disease in some form. All the best things are not crowded into one room, and the others left bare and shabby.
