THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 6 1884.

An Old Epitaph.

Here is an epitaph which was transcribed from a tombstone in a New Hampshire graveyard, a few weeks ago. There was no lack of candor in that part of the Granite State, evidently.

Here is old Caleb Hunt. By trade a bun. When Caleb died the devil cried: "Come, Caleb, come."

Who Ought to Vote for the Scott Act

The young man who casts his first ballot. The old man who will probably cast his last ballot.

The father who wants to protect his daughter from the curse of being married to a drinking man.

The total abstainer, who does not need saloons.

The drinking man, who feels the tempting power of saloons.

The moderate drinker, who may become a drunkard if the saloons continue.

The rich man, whose taxes are greatly increased by saloons.

The poor man who is compelled to support an army of worthless men because they are rumssellers.

The patriot who leaves his country.

The Christian, who, like the good Samaritan, loves his neighbor.

The minister, whose flocks is ravaged by the wolf of strong drink.

The Sunday school superintendent, who is an example to his school.

The teacher, who is the leader of his scholars.

The business man, because the liquor traffic injures his trade.

The landlord, because the rumsseller often gets much of the money that ought to be paid for rent.

The railroad official, because liquor disqualifies men from properly discharging their duties.

The railroad stockholders, because drunken employees destroy the property of railroads, through carelessness caused by drink.

Travellers, because their lives are imperilled by being in the hands of intemperate men.

Thoughts on Little Women.

We are going to contain ourselves no longer. We love little women, and that's all there is about it.

They are more egotistical, more spontaneously lovable, more sweetly sweet, than their taller sisters, and the more sweetly sweet a sweetie, 'twas it, the better. That's logic, isn't it?

And then it's so much easier and more natural to call a little sweetie sweet, a "birdie," or a "dovey," or an "angel," than to call a tall girl those names, isn't it? We've been there ourselves, and that's our experience.

And then when the little sweetie sweet takes a fancy to our knees, she doesn't weigh half as heavy as the big sweetiesweet and we can hold on to her ever so much longer. That's business, isn't it?

And then when the little sweetie sweet does sit on our knees, her head just hits our shoulder as naturally as can be, and we can take it out of her lips without half the exertion necessary to go through the same performance with the tall sweetie sweet. That's sensible, isn't it?

And then what can be more pleasant than to just bend down a little to kiss the little woman instead of having to stretch your neck like a crane's to get even with the lips of the tall girl?

But these are only temporary advantages; there are others of more substantial merit. It doesn't cost half as much to feed or dress the little sweetie sweet as it does the big one.

She takes a smaller hat and bustle, for instance; her false hair doesn't weigh as much as the tall girl's; she can save several yards at the bottom of her dress by wearing them short. How would a tall girl look in a short dress?

And then her waist is smaller and this is a great thing when you have your arm around it and can take it all in. You feel that you are all there; which is not the case with the big girl's waist.

And then, again, you can fill the small sweetie sweet up with ice cream and colored syrup half as fast again as you can the big girl. That's another advantage, isn't it?

The little woman is just as nice as they are made them, and as a strictly feminine institution lays over any other. We admire the little woman, and hope that she will flourish!

Storekeeper—"This piece is counterfeit." Customer—"I know it. I got it here." Storekeeper—"That cannot be. We never take bad money." Customer—"I am aware that it's your rule to give bad money, not to take it; but I trust you will make an exception this time."

Immediately on being stung by a bee, place the hollow barrel of a key round the sting and press until it begins to hurt. On removing the key the sting will be found lying outside the puncture it has made and inside the ring formed by the pressure of the key barrel. All pain ceases at once, no swelling takes place, and in a few minutes it is difficult to find again where one has been stung.

Everyone suffering from painful corns will be glad to learn that there is a new and painless remedy discovered by which the very worst class of corns may be removed entirely, in a short time and without pain. A Great Discovery. Mr. Wm. Thomas, Newton, Ia., says: My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years.

If a few grains of common sense could be infused into the thick noddles of those who perpetually and alternately irritate and weaken their stomachs and bowels with drastic purgatives, they would use the highly accredited and healthful laxative and tonic, Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which causes "good digestion to wait an appetite, and health on both."
