Where patient mosses grow. The shady nooks and corners By forest, brook and burn, They hide in deep recesses The waving feathery fern; And through their sheltered silence Shy wings flit to and fro, And bits of song are breaking Where humble flowers blow.

The shady nooks and corners, Apart from stir and strife; and distant from the tumult Of busy whirling life, Where some of God's dear children Alone are left and low, There star-like, strong and steadfast,

The lights of promise glow. The shady nooks and corners Wherein we dwell with God, And conquer pair and weakness Sustained by staff and rod; Perhaps in all earth's journey Nought sweeter shall we know Than just the sanctuaries Where hidden graces grow.

The shady nooks and corners Screened from the glaring day ;-Songs in the night He giveth To those who watch and pray And blessing comes when leaving The trodden road we go To rest amid the shadows Where living waters flow.
