The young Jolks.

THREE SIDES TO A STORY. MER VERSION.

"Who is Ned?" Why, I thought that you know We were once engaged for a year! O, but that was before I knew you-That was ages ago, my dear. "Over cordial!" Now, Rubby, for shame! Such nonsense! You, that was his wife-

Demure little things, and so fame-Men do make such blunders in life. Ned was such a good-hearted fellow ; "Devoted!" of course he was thou; O, you need not frown and turn yellow I could have had a dozen of men.

One thing I will say, however, He's unhappy, that I can see Poor fellow; he probably never Quite conquered his passion for me "Too poor!" yes, but proud as a lord.

When you came-well, you know the rest-Dear, you would take me abroad ; Yes, of course I loved you the best

"Ned, who is that overdressed lady You greeted so warmly to-day? What is it you're keeping so shady: What is she to you, anyway?"

"That lady-the wife of a banker (Thought ber toilet remarkably fine) By the way, you ought to thank her. She was once an old flame of mine. I offered my congratulations:

Nothing more, to tell you the truth Our affair, mere infatuation. In the days of my callow youth. Was she foud of me ! Well she said so. Did I love her? We spooned for a year. Why didn't we marry? Why, you know

I met you, and loved you, my dear. Of course, we all knew that he bought her-Youth and beauty exchanged for pelf-What? If you weren't a rich man's daughter ? My dear! I inved you for yourself!" THE TRUE VERSION.

Twas the old, old story repeated, of two young bearts that beat as one ; Their twin aspirations defeated, and their youn lives forever undone.

You think so? Well, you're sadly mistaker they each had a -something to sell; Now each fancies the other for aken, and bot yes, they both. " married well." -Town Topics.

A BRAVE BOY.

BY EREN E, REXPORD. I like to read of heroes. I like to se men who have done heroic deeds. I feel strengthened by thinking of what they

Not long since I saw a hero. I was a witness of his brave deed, and I felt a warm clow at my heart-a hundred times since at the thought of it. But the deed of bravery was one the papers said nothing about. They would not have considered it worth mentioning, I suppose; but I do, and I am going to write it down to help others who may be tempted as this boy was. For my hero was only a boy; but there is the making of a strong man in him.

It happened in this way; I was walking down the street and stopped in front of saloon to talk with a friend. As we stood there two boys came along. " Come in and have something to drink," said one of them. "Thank you," was the reply, "but I never drink." "Oh! temperance are you?" said the other, that had a suspicion of a speer in it. "Yes," answered the boy bravely. "I plaints. don't believe in drinking liquor."

"Well, you needn't drink iiquor if you don't want to," said his companion. "Take some lemonade."

"Not in a saloon," was the other's "Why not?" asked his friend "I won't make you drunk because they sell whiskey over the same bar, will it?" "I don't suppose it would," was the reply. "But saloons are bad places, and I don't believe in patronizing them."

"What a moral young fellow you are!" said his friend, with contempt in his words. "Do you intend to preach when you get to

" No, I don't expect to," was the reply. "But I intend to make a man of myself; and I never knew a fellow to amount to Oil, which does not deteriorate, and as much who got into the habitiof frequenting | thorough and sure. "I haven't asked you to hang about saloons, have I?" demanded his friend angrily. "One would think from what you say that I asked you to get drunk." "You didn't ask me to get drauk," was the reply, "but you have asked me to take the first step in that direction. If I drank now, I would probably drink again. How formed of drinking ltquor ?"

Some other young fellows had come up by this time, and the one who had invited his friend to drink, turned to them and

"You've come just in time to hear a temperance lecture. Go, on, Bob; maybe you can convert these chaps." Then they laughed. But Bob did not get angry. He looked them bravely in the face and said: "I suppose you think I am 'soft' because I won't drink. I know you think it foolish because I refused to go into the saloon and have a glass of lemonade" (to his friend): "but I don't, and I am not afraid to stand up for what I think is right. If you want to drink, you will do it, I suppose, in spite of anything I could say against it, but you think, I suppose, that I am a coward in will look at mine;" and after doing so, he not drinking, but I think I should prove went on preaching. myself a coward in doing it?"

Wasn't I glad to hear the boy say that? I couldn't help going to him and telling

"Thank you," said, he looking pleased at what I said. "I mean to be a man, and I know I shouldn't be if I got to

He was right. God bless the young hero!

Bickles Anti-Consumptive Syrup is a combination of several medicinal herbs which exert a most wonderful influence in curing pulmonary consumption and all other diseases of the lungs, chest and throat. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, and gives ease even to the greatest sufferer. Coughs, colds, shortness of breath, and affections of the chest, attended with weakness of the digestive organs, or with general debility, seem to vanish under its use. No other remedy acts so readily in allaying inflammation or breaking up a severe cold, even the most obstinate cough is overcome by its penetrating and healing properties. When children are affected with colds, coughs, inflammation of the lungs, croup, quinsey, and sore throat, this Syrup is of vast importance. The number of deaths among children from these discases is truly alarming. It is so palatable that a child will not refuse it, and is put at such a price that will not exclude the poor from its benefits.
