

GRANDMA'S LITTLE LAUNDRESSES.

Our mother went out to a neighbor's one day. She lives on the corner, just over the way. As a door closed behind her, she heard her say: 'What is it you are doing? The little ones play? Now we have two dolls named Kate and Irene. With the prettiest waicores that ever were seen. And we take great delight in keeping them clean. And make them as neat as a daisy or queen. So we thought we'd play house and amuse them with wash day. And we got out the tub and began right away. Sister Nellie she rubbed and rubbed till she was blue. Till her face and her hands were as red as a rose. I took them and washed them and then I put them up. Oh a line by the stove where they could get dry. And when we were through the second so confound they looked as if some by first-class laundress. Well then we were tired and thought it was best before we started up to take a good rest. So we just left the things in the midst of the room. With possible water in front of the door. And would you believe it! Although we did not go to bed and lay the kitchen up clean. We forgot all about it, and it was not till the next morning that we noticed it. 'Nina a wretched of support till you see these again.'

A NOBLE SAMPLE OF BRITISH MANHOOD.

As a model of lofty eloquence combined with elegance of diction we can not refrain from quoting the closing sentences of Gladstone's great speech in the House of Commons on introducing his Irish Land Bill April 7, 1881. No matter how often we read it as to this statesman's oratorical power all are proud of him as a representative of British civilization, bearing the fruit of age. As an all-round man we could not claim against the highest product of any other age.

On the occasion referred to he closed with these words: 'I am sure, sir, it is to be our guide. And as it has been said that love is stronger than death, even so justice is stronger than popular excitement, stronger than the passions of the moment, stronger even than the graces, the excitements, and the adulations of the past. Walking in that path we cannot err; guided by that Light—that Divine Light—we are safe. Every step that we take upon this road is a step that brings us nearer to the goal, and every obstacle, even though it may seem for the moment insurmountable, can only for a little while retard, and never can defeat, the final triumph.'

SHOES FOR SLIPPY EDDIES.

We live and learn. The Germans are an ingenious people. They have invented horse shoes for bad roads. This is how they do it. The blacksmith, when finishing a horse's shoe, hanches a hole in the two ends. When the shoe is cold he taps a wire thread and screws into the shoe, when the horse is in the road, a sharp pointed kind of an inch in length. When the shoe is fitted the horse travels securely over the worst possible roads. Both riding, driving and draught horses are shod in this way. When the horse comes to the stable the groom unscrews the pointed stud and screws in a bolt, so that no damage can happen to the horse, and the screw holes are prevented from filling. When the horse is going out the groom takes out the bolt and screws in the pointed stud. There is no fear of the horse coming back with broken knees or sprained sinews, and the public are spared the sight of horses down or slipping in all directions.

AN EXTRAORDINARY OFFER.

To ALL WANTING EMPLOYMENT. We manufacture, energetic agents in every county in the United States and Canada to sell a patent article of great merit, on its merits. An article having a large sale paying over 100 per cent. profit, having no competition, and on which the agent is protected in the exclusive sale by a deed given free of cost. With all these advantages to our agents, and the fact that it is an article that can be sold to every horse owner, it might not be necessary to make an extraordinary offer to secure good agents at once, but we have concluded to make it so, not only to our confidence in the merits of our invention, but in its salubrious by any agent that will handle it with energy. Our agents are at work in making from $150 to $300 a month clear, and this fact makes it safe for us to make our offer to all who are out of employment. Any agent that will give our business a thirty days' trial and fail to clear at least $100 in this time, where all expenses are returned, will be paid for our services. No such employment of agents ever desired to make such offers, nor would we if we did not know that we have agents now making more than double this amount. Our large descriptive circulars explain our offer fully, and these we wish to send to everyone out of employment who will send us three cent stamps for postage. Send at once and secure the agency in time for the boom, and go to work on the terms named in our extraordinary offer.
