The Young Folks.

AN ODE ON THE TOOTH-ACHE.

We often have
Tooth-ache at night.
They tell of days gone by;
How men of yore
With patience bore
Their ills without a sigh.
For Job's hard pains,
His loss and gains,
Night fits, and fits to break;
But all his ills
Without relief.
Was free from the tooth-ache.
And brave men
Affected them
With pain of old; shake;
But that disease
Even gave them ease,
For they had no tooth-ache.
So strong
Suffered the tooth-ache;
When Cupid did take;
Through his dear wife
He lost his life.
Last died without tooth-ache.

SHE CAUGHT HIM ON THE FLY.

At eight o'clock the other morning a wife followed her husband down to the gate as he was starting for town and kindly said to him: "William, you know how sadly I want a blue button dress."

"Yes, dear," he remarked, "but you know how hard up I am. As soon as I can see my way clear, you shall have the new dress and a new hat to boot. Be patient, good, and your reward shall be great."

Forty minutes after this he emerged from a restaurant with a big basket and a fishing rod, bound up the river. In the basket were chicken, pickles, cake, fruit pie, and a bottle of liquor of rich color, and he was just lighting a fine cigar when his wife came along.

"What! you here?" he exclaimed.

"Yes, I was just going to the market."
"Where are you going? What's in the basket?"

"I was going to carry this fishing rod to a friend in Fenwick street," he modestly answered.

"And that basket?"
"This basket? Well, I was going to take it to the orphan asylum as a present to the children. It is a donation from six business friends."

"William, I don't believe it."
"Sir! don't talk so loud."

"William, I shall talk louder yet!" she exclaimed. "I'll bet you are going fishing."

"Mary, have I ever deceived you?" he plaintively asked. "I never have. As proof of my sincerity you can take this basket to the asylum yourself."

"And I'll do it," she promptly replied, as she relieved him of it.

"Mary, hadn't you?"
"No, sir, I hadn't. You had better take that fishing rod, as much as may want it, and be careful how you stand about in the hot sun."

She left him there. He watched her take the car for home, and then he returned the fishing rod and crossed the street and said to an acquaintance: "Tom, I'm suffering from neuralgia, and the excursion is off till next week." Too bad, but we can never tell what a day may bring forth."

There were chicken and pickles and other good things on the table at noon, but he never smiled, even when she wished that she was an orphan, if that was the way she was fed. It was only when she handed him the bill that he could safely tuck it into the basket, and say it labelled "Good for little children," that he said:

"Mary, it is an awful thing for a wife to get the impression that her husband is a dressing impotency."

"It must be," she replied as she took up the other chicken leg.

Best of All

Cough medicine, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is far better known than ever. No preparation for Throat and Lung Troubles is so prompt in its effects, so agreeable the taste, and so widely known, as this. It is the only medicine that I have ever heard of.

I have used it for years from a hereditary trouble that, whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, always gives me a very annoying cough, and sometimes a difficulty in breathing. I have tried a great many remedies, but none does so well as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the only medicine that I have ever heard of.

It has a special charm for young children, because whenever I take cold or am exposed to inclement weather, always gives me a very annoying cough, and sometimes a difficulty in breathing.
