NELLI'S ORDER. TO THE PHOTOGRAPHEN You see, Mr. Artist,

We've brought Baby Grace; We want you to copy Her dear little face. A dozen good pictures

We want by to-night: Now please Mr. Artist. Do make 'em just right.' Not same as each other,

Like those you once took, But a different picture For every sweet look. Make one when she's happy. And one with a scowl. And one when she's sober

And wire as an owl. Make one when she's creeping. And one when she stands, And one when she's coaring With both little hands, And one when she's sleepy,

And one when she's proud, And one when she's crowing And laughing out loud. And please, Mr. Artist, You mustn't leave out This dear little giggle I'm speaking about,

Nor all her soft cooing. "Da-da" and "goo-goo; I sha'n't like the pictures One bit if you do.

It is an nadeniable fart that a due degree of importance has not, during late years, been secorded, in the education of American young women to a practical knowledge of the duties that will devolve upon them them when they assume the cares of homes of their own. Their grandmothers certainly, and probably their mothers, learned the science of house-keeping; but, to an injurious extent, the education of the average girl of the period is generally either wholly frivolous, purely ornamental, or, at best, so abstrase and im practicable as to be of hittle value in fitting her to fulfill her destiny as wile and mother. If she is not tamohs to select food in the market for the family table, how to prepare it well, how to serve it properly, and how, by an infinity of the delaty, graceful acts and bits of penetical knowledge about housekeeping, to make ber home bright, attractive and happy, she will fall far shors of what will

"In May last, my youngest child," fourteen months old, began to have sores gather on its head and body. We applied various simple remedies without avail. The sorus increased in number and discharged copiously. A physician was called, but the sores continued to multiply until in a few months they nearly covered the child's head and body. At last we began the use of Ayer's Sar-saparilla. In a few days a marked change for the better was manifest. The sores assumed a more healthy condition, the discharges were gradually dimin-ished, and finally crased altogether.
