WINDMILLER GRIMES. A sultry day in the month of July. Down at Easthampton, where see gulls Sy, And never a breath of cooling breeze Came from the hills or the waveless seas, Windmiller Grimes at the door of his mill Glasced up at the sails all limp and still,

And softly whistled a rollicking air. Softly, for Grimes had no breath to spare. "Why do you whistle?" said Neighbor Lind. Said the jolly miller, "To raise the wind: It's for lack of wind my pipe I try." The neighbor smiled at the odd reply That's a parador, Grimes. I'd like to know How without wind your pipes you blow.

EARNING TO RIDE A BICYCLE A deal of stuff has been written about he art of riding, but a half-hour's experience in a riding-school or with a cyclist who has a little common sense is of more actual use than any amount of time wasted over written instruction. 'In all cities agents have either ridingschools or the teacher takes the pupils out to a piece of unfrequented road, generally about dosk, as the pupil cuts more or less of an awkward figure, and is naturally averse to furnishing the public with a free

It may be accepted as a fact that any one can ride a safety; that it is as easy as walking; but few ride off-hand, beause of the fear of a fell. A novice is best taught to ride as follows : Take him on the road, on a portion where there is a slight incline. The road must be free from stones, mud, vehicles, and spectators, the last being most fatal to success. The tutor is to hold the wheel while the pupil mounts, and as the pupil pedals along, the teacher is to balance the wheel and run beside it. For new riders these things must be obperved :- The seat is to be at just the proper height, neither too high or too low; the rider is not to tug at the handles; he is to be taught that the : wheel is to be steaded by turning the front or steering wheel slightly to she side to which you are falling. The pedalling must be regular, the same amount of power to be applied to the right pedal as to the left. Most riders turn the handle bar too much in the effort to save themselves, and thus precipitate the fal they might have avoided by a slight turn. After the pupil has been wheeled about a bit, he should be started up the slight incline the wheel up the hill gives him increased gestion, it is impossible for the body balancing power. The writer has taught a secure the requisite amount of nourishnumber of people in this way inside the mert. Ayer's Sarsaparilla not only stimu. half hour .- F. P. I began to chew at the age of twelve. A few years later I commenced smoking. The habit grew upon me till I was smoking a large portion of the time except when asleep. At length I joined with the church | hoss with horns? Wasn't that something and very soon abandoned the filthy habit of | gon ?" chewing tobacco. I still, however, enjoyed the cigar.

Just at this time, I met a friend, who with a countenance beaming with love, said. 4 It don't look well to see a member of the church smoking." "You are right, said I; and taking the cigar from my mouth I threw it into the gutter. That was the last cigar I ever smoked. I was emancipated from a slavery worse than Egyptian bondage.

I now deposited the money I had been so long squandering on tobacco, in the Seamen's Bank for Saving. I will tell the boys what I did with it, and they will see how unwise and how inexpedient it is to commence the expensive, demoralizing habit of smoking or chewing tobacco. I found a very pleasant place for sale. There were two acres of land, with abondent shade and fruit trees, a good garden, a fine view, etc. The cigar money was drawn upon to purchase the place and it any relief, until we got a bottle of Northrop
