NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Germany, France and other European nations are resenting the McKinley tariff by laying probability duties on American grain and hog products. England is now the only market open to the surplus products of American Agriculture, but there is a possibility of that market failing them.

The London Eng. Times predicts that the McKinley Bill will cut both ways, and in a manner surprising to its authors. It will do grave harm to America and disgrace the general industries of the world. America will be the chief sufferer in the end. Things elsewhere will adjust themselves in course of time to the new course of things, while America will be left permanently paying higher prices for inferior goods and wasting her labour and industrial energy in vain and misdirected efforts in regard to national economic laws.

The Army and Navy Gazette says—Sir Frederick Middleton, previous to his departure from Ottawa, issued a farewell address to the people of Canada, in which he fully vindicates his character in eyes of all right thinking and honorable men. The whole incident is as creditable to Canadian politicians that it had best be forgotten. Sir Frederick Middleton leaves Canada without a stain on his character. If he had doubt this, they have only to read the manly and straightforward manner in which he deals with all the insinuations of his accusers and refutes their charge one by one.

One distinguishing trait in Canadian character in general is the determination to win success not by sudden hope and bounds not by fervid speculation or by anything that smacks of gambling, which we regret to acknowledge is too prevalent a characteristic of American society. It is on this account that Canadians find so much favor as trusted employees and are so largely employed in every capacity that demands character and ability. We trust that it may be long before they will lose their traits of character which tend to the upbuilding of true manhood and are the only road to permanent success. It was Abraham Lincoln who said "you can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time," and it will be found that no man ever made any real gain by any other than honest methods. All other means are deceptive and only lead to apparent prosperity, unaccompanied by real satisfaction and happiness.—Chicago Tribune.

EXTRAORDINARY SUICIDE.

A Horrified Husband Finds His Young Wife Dead in Her Home.

KIRKLEY, Sept. 27.—A suicide extraordinary was committed at Pottersville, in the township of King, on the 27th inst., by Isabella Rae, the eleven months' wife of James Jans, a respectable mechanic residing there. Their married relations had been most happy, and the prospects of the young couple were bright. The report of the tragedy has caused an immense sensation.

The deceased conversed freely with her husband before his departure for work at 5 a.m., narrating his plan of for day's work, and she kissed him as usual as he left. She had not breakfasted when she committed the act, which was in a manner unparalleled. On the table beside the corps was found a gimlet, a pair of large shears, a carving knife, a table knife, a meat fork, a can of Paris green, a bottle of laudanum, and a shot gun. She had placed a looking glass on the table, and attempted with each knife to cut her throat, but they were too dull, and small gashes were made. She had taken sums of the laudanum, and kneeling on the floor she had discharged the gun, which lay across the table, with a poker. The charge passed through the heart, and the body fell forward until the forehead touched the floor, in which position the horrified husband found it when he returned at 8 p.m. from his work. A verdict of suicide, while temporarily insane, was returned.

GUELPH CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

An Excellent Exhibit—Its Success Marred by Unfavorable Weather.

Guelph, Sept. 26.—The rain which commenced to fall this morning, continuing until about 2 o'clock p.m., had the effect of marring the success, in point of attendance, of the Central fair. When the weather cleared there was a continuous stream of visitors to the grounds for about two hours, and at 4 o'clock it was estimated that about 3,000 persons were present. The show, both as to the number of entries and the quality of the articles, far exceeded that of any previous year, affording evidence that the Central as an institution, can be maintained with profit, to the association. The stock exhibit embraced some of the finest horses and cattle ever shown here. The rotunda was well filled, the display of fine art productions being very large and varied and of a high standard of excellence. The quality of the roots, vegetables, grain, flowers, fruit, etc., was far above the average, and indicated that in these lines this has been a very productive season.

The poultry class was well filled and up to the standard of former years. The city calved the occasion during the afternoon.

Seals Scarce in Behring Sea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—The United States Fish Commission arrived to-day after a trip of four months and twenty-one days to Behring Sea and return. Commander Tanner confirms the report about the scarcity of seals in Behring Sea. More seals were seen between Cape Mendocino and Cape Flattery on the way north than in the whole stay in Behring Sea. The commander reports that the codfish and halibut banks from Unalaska Pass to Bristol Bay are extensive and valuable.

BIRCHALL FOUND GUILTY.

And Sentenced to Be Hanged on the 14th November.

NO CHANCE OF ESCAPE.

The Birchall trial at Woodstock, which lasted over a week, came to a conclusion at a late hour Monday night with a verdict of guilty. The trial was remarkable for its fairness and the ability with which it was conducted. Mr. Gaist, while weaving an impregnable web around the guilty man, was moderate throughout, and avoided unduly pressing any doubtful point against the prisoner. Mr. Blackstock brought a rare intelligence to the defense, and made a most eloquent appeal for the life of a fellow being. Judge MacMahon, whose experience as a criminal lawyer eminently fitted him for the trying task, delivered a masterly address, characterized by judicial impartiality and calmness. The result of the trial was inevitable, and in the face of the cruel and treacherous murder that was committed in the lonely swamp, in the face of the violation of all common humanity, even those most repugnant to the death sentence must admit that such an outrage against society can only be condoned in one way, that of the execution of the murderer.

Mr. Blackstock's address.

WATERLOO.—In Navarre, on the 25th Inst., Mrs. Wm. McArthur, of a daughter.

BONKERSVILLE.—In Navarre, on the 26th September, the wife of J. S. Bonkers, of a son.

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. Oxley—My Lord, I move for the sentence of the Court on the prisoner J. Reid Birchall, convicted of the crime of murder.

His Lordship—It is part of the solemn and painful duty cast upon me to pass upon the sentence of the court for the felony for which you have been convicted. I can only say that I fully concur in the verdict which has been returned by the jury on the indictment against you. You have been defended with great ability and there has been no point connected with that defense that has not been fully brought before the jury, and passed before them with all the fervor and all the ability that human nature could command. While I say, I may say that the inevitable conclusion that must have reached the mind, not only of the jury, but of almost everyone who listened to the trial, was that you conceived, premeditated, and carried out the murder of the young man who had been entrusted to you by an aged father, as the heir of his patrimony. It was your duty and your bounden duty to have looked after and protected him. Notwithstanding that, without any compunction on your part you prepared to take his life and to reap the miserable reward which you thought was to be obtained by asking the price of blood-money, which you had then already taken possession of. It is melancholy to think that a young man with an education that you possessed, with the opportunities, which no doubt, you must have had to further your own material interests, you should have forgotten yourself as you have done the course which you have pursued and prepared to dip your hand into the blood of a fellow-man. I am melancholy to think that such a short period after becoming a married man, and being connected with an estimable and respectable family, that you should have brought this upon me.

SAID FATAL ACCIDENT.
