Speculation is a word that often begins with the second letter.

To rejeice in the happiness of others is to make it car own; to produce it is to make it more than ear own.

The successful man, as a ru'e, is the ope who knows the trick of daing the right thing at the right time ; and the trick is not one which comes from impiration, but from trained habits and thought.

Without the friendly exchange of kindly words and actions, and without the sunshine of loving looks and smiles of welcome and encouragement, a botse may be a habitation, but never truly a home.

- The test of a man is not whether he can govern a kingdom single handed, but whether he can govern himself, and thus have his private life tender and considerate so as to make his wife and children happy. The effect produced by a man who is in earnest will siways be greater than that produced by one who is only playing his part rand the character of the worker will in some way or other, be mirrored in the work that he produces.

LINCOLN'S MELANCHOLY. His Sympathetic Nature and His Early Misfortunes.

Those who saw much of Abraham Lin coin during the later days of his life, were greatly impressed with the expression of profound melancholy his face always wore

Mr. Lincoln was of a peculiarly sympathetic and kindly nature. These strong characteristics influenced, very happily, as it proved, his entire politicial career. They would not seem, at first glance, to be efficient aids to political success; but in the pecu-·liar emergency which Lincoln, in the providence of God, was called to meet, no essel of common clay could possibly have become the "chosen vesse! of the Lord."

Those acquainted with him from boy. bood knew that early griefs had tinged his whole life with sadness. . His partner in the grocery business at Salem, was "Uncle" Billy Green, of Talinia, Ill., who used at night, when customers were few, to hold the grammar while Lidcoln recited

It was to his sympathetic ear Lincoln told the story of his love for sweet Ann The charge is Two Cents a word each in Rutledge ; and he, in return, effered what comfort he could when poor Ann died, and ads. Lincoln's great hearf nearly broke. "After Ann dief." says "Uncle" Billy

"on stormy nighte, when the wind blew the rain against the roof. Ate would set thar in the grocery, his elbows on his knees his face in his hands, and the tears runnin' through his fingers. I hated to see him feel bad, au' I'd eay 'Abe don't cry'; an' he'd look up an' say 'I can't help it, the rain's a fallin' on her." There are many who can sympathize with this overpowering crief, as they think of a lost one when "the rain's fallin' on her." What adds polguancy to the grief some times is the thought that the lost one might have been sared.

Fortunate, indeed, is William Johnson, of Corone, L. I., a tuilder, who writes June | LINIMENT for bronchitis and asthma, 28, 159): "List February, on returning and it has cared me. I believe it the best. from church one night, my daughter complained of having a pain in her ankle. The paic gradually criended until her entire limb was gradually swolled and very paidful to the touch. We called a physician, who after careful gramination, pronounced it disease of the kidneys of long standing. All we could do, did hot seem to benefit ber until we tried Warner's Safe Care: from the first the commenced to improve. When she commenced taking it she could turn over in bed, and could just more her hands a little, but to day she is as well as ever the was. I believe I owe the recovery of my daughter to its use."

I MUST GO TO WILLIE.

Darling the late war there was h woman n Maine who received a letter which ran thus ! " Willie is sick ; he is dying." . This mother feed the letter, and looking up to her husband said : Father I must go to Willie. No. wife; you cannot go, he replied. You know there is a line bayonete between you and Willie. She did what the Christian mother always does when her boy is in peril. Size spread that letter before the Lord and mayed all troubles. night. Next morning she said : Father I must go to Willie, I must. Well, wife, he said. I do not know what will become of the money. She came down here to Washington, and the man in the executive mansion, who had a heart as tender as a womau's - Abraham Lincoln - brushed away a tear as he wrote, and handing ber paper said, Madam that will take you k the enemy's line, but what will become of you after you got there I cannot tell.

She took the paper and came down to the line and picket; she handed him the pass, and he looked at it and at her, and said, we don't take that thing here. I know it, she said ; but Willie, my boy, is dying in Richmond and I'm going to him. Now shoot! He did not shoot but stood awed and hushed in the presence of a love that is more like God's than any other that surges in the human soul in its douthless uuselfishuese. All that mother thought of was her boy. Su ungled through the lines, she went down to the hospital. The surgeon said to her, madem, you must be very careful; your boy will survive no excitement. She crept past cot after cot, and knelt at the foot of one where her boy lay, and putting up her hands prayed in smothered tones : O God. spare my boy. The sick man raised his white hands from under the sleet; the sound of his mother's voice had gone clear down into the valley and shadow of death, where the soul of the young man was going out in its ebbing tide. Raising his hand he said, "Mother I knew you would come." That boy is a man to-day, saved by a mother's love. It is a same deathless mother's love that has knocked at the doors of the schools through State legislatures; and is to day knocking at the door of our national capitol asking that boys may be saved. We women lay down at the cradle our youth, our beauty, our talents, anything, everything, to the little bit of hamanity there. We cannot help it. It's God's providence for the child; and it may likewise be God's providence for the nation that has roused the heart of women and called the death less love of mother tide to participate in this great movement. . If we save the child ren to-day we shall have saved the nation to-morrow. - The Progressive Age.
