Baker's deceased husband, John Baker, served in the Union Army during the civil war and it is claimed contracted disease from exposure which hastened his death. Last Thursday Mr. Peter Campbell, of Trafalgar, as the roads were bad for driving, walked up the G.T.R. track to Milton. After transacting what business he had on hand he set out for home at 4 p.m., going the way he came. He had got but a short distance out of town when he was smitten by paralysis. Feeling the stroke coming, he managed to get clear of the rails and lay where he fell for some bours, when he recovered elightly and came back to Milton. He was unable to walk unless when he could get hold of something to support himself, had to crawl a great way on his hands and knees, and was unable to reach the Wallace House until about 1 a.m. He was in a priisble condition, his hands badly cut by catching barbed wire fences and his clothes very muddy. He was taken home on Friday, but never rallied and died on Saturday. Mr. Campbell was an old reeident of this county and was well known.
