UNDER THE EARTH.

The workmen in the deepest mines of Europe swelter in almost intolarable beat, and yet they have never yet penetrated over one seventh thousandth part of the distance from the surface to the centre of the earth. In the lower levels of some o the Comstock mines the men lought scalding water, and could labor only three or four hours at a time until the Satro tannel pierced the mines and drew off some of the terrible heat, which had stood at 1200 The decepest boring ever made, that at Sperenberg, near Berlin, penetrates only 4,175 feet, about 1,000 feet deeper than the famous artesian well at St. Louis. While borings and mines reveal to us only a few secrete relating solely to the temperature and constitution of the earth for a few thousand feet below the surface, we are able by means of volcanoes, to form some notion of what is going on at greater depths. There have been many theories about the causes of volcanoes, but it is now generally held that that though they are produced by the intense heat of the interior of the earth that they are directly connected with the malten mass that lies many miles below the immediate sources of volcanic energy. Everybody knows that many rocks are formed on the floor of the ocean, and it has been found that a twentieth to a seventh of their weight is made up of imprisoned water. Now, these rocks are buried in time under overlaying strata which serve as a blanket to keep in the heat of the interior. This heat turns the water into super-heated stegm, which melts the hardest, rocks, and when the steam finds a fissure in the strata above, it breaks through to the surface with terrific energy, and we have a volcano. We find that these outpourings that have lain for countless ages many thousands of feet below the surface are well adapted to serve the purposes of man. Many a vineyard flourishes on the volcanic ashes from Vesavius, and volcanic mad has clothed the hills of New Zealand with fine forests and its plains with luxuriant verdure. The most wonderful display of the results of volcanic energy is seen in the northern corner of our own land, a region of lofty forests and of great fertility. - Goldikwaite's on account of their trade. Materialism, like other forms of infidelity, has a basis of insincerity. At a meeting in Liverpool an evangeher publicly said: "I do not believe there is an honest man in the world who really believes that we are all simply matter and go out of existence at death. If there is a real materialist in this audience I would like to see him." A man rose up and shouted; "Well, here is one." "Come up here," said the evangelist, "I want all these people to see a man whose mother died like a dog and that was the end of her." "You are a liar," shouted the man, "she was one of the best women that ever lived, and she for in heaven to-day ! The fellow was fairly caught in his own trap.
