ABOUT A BOY. Just above the wharves of Glasgow, on the banks of the Clyde, there once lived a factory boy whom I will call Davie. At the age of ten he entered a cotton factory as a " piecer." He was employed from six o'clock in the morning till eight at night. His parents were very poor and he well knew that his must be aboybood of very hard labor. But then and there, in that busning factory, he resolved that he would obtain an education and become an intelligent and useful man. With his very first week's wages he purchased Ruddiman's "Rudiments of Latin."

He then entered an evening school which met between the hours of eight and ten. He paid the expenses of his instruction out of his own hard earnings. . At the age of sixteen he could road Vir gil and Horace as readily as the pupils -of the English Grammar schools.

He next began a course of self instruc tion. He had been advanced in the factory from piecer to a spinning jenny.

He brought his books to the factory and, placing one of them in the "jenny," with the lesson before him, he divided his attention between the running of the spindles and the radiments of knowledge.

He entered Glasgow University. He knew he must work his way; but he also knew the power of resolution and he was willing to make almost any sacrifice to gain the end.

He worked at cotton spinning in th summer, lived frugally and applied his saving to his college studies in the winter. He completed the allotted course, and at the close was able to say, with praiseworthy pride: "I have never had a farthing that I did not carn."

That boy was Dr. David Livingstone.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

In its May number the Methodist Magaziec continues to give a number of articles of special interest in connection with the Methodist Centennial. One of these is an account of a recent visit to Epworth, the cradle of Methodism, by the Rev. E. N. Baker, B.A., with ten engravings of the old town, rectory and church. Mr. Percy H. Punshon, who inherits much of his father's eloquence of diction, writes a graphic account of Napoleon's exile at St. Helena, with numerous engravings. Rev. Geo. J. Bond, B.A., gives an illustrated account of a recent visit to Ephesus, and his explorations of the ruins of the famous temple of Diana. Another article, beautifully illustrated, describes the quaint old city of Zurich, and the strange pre-historic pile dwellings of Switzerland. Dr. Daniel Clarke, Superintendent of the Asylum for the Insane, contributes an interesting paper on "Popular Delusions about Insanity and Insane." Mr. Thomas Thompson gives a narrative sketch of graphic fidelity of an old-fashioned love-feast and other experiences of early Methodism in Toronto; and the Rev. Geo. Bond tells a thrilling story of "The Castaway of Fish Bock." John You can't convert him. Haberton's fascinating story, "All be knew," is continued. These Centennial numbers of the Magazine should be in every Methodist Sanday School.

If there is any pain more excruciating than sciatica, it is yet to be found, and such must have been the experience of Mr. D. C. Simons, who writes from Lowville. N. Y., U. S. A., February 2, 1889, and says: "I suffered six months with scietica in the hip; was confined to bed three months, used crutches six weeks. I used three bottles of St. Jacobs Oil and was cured.
