ON these tables will be placed many desirable and useful articles, at greatly reduced prices, and indeed will be found there excepting at a price that will make it a veritable bargain, and in many cases marked at less price than we paid for it. In no way but by personal inspection will you do justice to the values offered on our Bargain Tables.

You will ask, perhaps, how we can afford to do this? Our answer is: You will quite understand that in a business the size of ours there must be a great many ends, or broken lines of goods that have been all sold out but, say to or the three pieces. Take for instance a line of Dress Goods that we may have had in all the feading shades and have now only, say three shades left ; you can see it would pay us to turn the balance of this line into cash, even at a loss, and put the money into another line instead. Or it might be that the article offered was bought by us last season (but is none the worse for that), and it would pay us to take much less than the regular price, and turn the same into cash. In every properly conducted business the stock is kept clean and fresh, even though a few
