My Wife.

"She's a very nice woman, my dear Mickleberry, a very nice woman, indeed," said Mr. Mickleberry, sagely, "but you mustn't let me hear of her leaving you."

"I don't know what you mean," said Mrs. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mr. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mrs. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mr. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mrs. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mr. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mrs. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mr. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."

"I'm sure you will," said Mrs. Mickleberry, "but I'm sure I shall never leave you."
