THE TICKET-SELLING SIREN.

Of tempting I've experience some
I'm dangerous in a whirl;
But I will run like blazes from
The ticket-selling girl.
She runs me down the racetrack in,
I feel I've caught a tartar,
I know that she will get the tin
And pull my leg for a quarter.

She's got a pic-nic in the park,
A social in the church,
A moonlight excursion after dark
She's got me in the lurch
I can't resist the siren's eye,
She's Mother's Eve's own darter
So tho' I'm nearly busted, I
Give up the needful quarter.

She spots me wherever'er I be,
In hamlet, town or grange,
She's sure to get me up a tree
And confiscate my change.
I bide my poor devoted head
And try in vain to start her,
I won't be safe until I'm dead
Or while I've got a quarter.

Oh! bitter, bitter is my cup,
For wheresoe'er I go,
The ticket siren bobbeth up
Serenely from below.
My pockets now are never full
And Time's a pic-nic tarrier,
Now watch this little siren pull
My helpless leg for a quarter.

CHINESE MEDICINE.

The medical art in China is mysterious and empirical. The medical profession is regulated by rules almost the opposite of those which prevail in England. In China the doctor receives a fixed salary as long as his patient is in good health. If the patient falls ill, the doctor's pay is stopped until a cure is effected. In England, a sick person usually tries to assist the doctor by explaining the symptoms of his case. In China, this would be considered an insult to the doctor. The doctor may feel the patient's pulse, examine his skin, and look at his tongue; but he may ask no questions. He is then expected to diagnose the disease from which the sick man is ailing, and to prescribe a remedy. The medicine prescribed is usually very cheap and very nasty, but some drugs are highly prized, and there are certain precious stones which are believed to be of wonderful efficacy in curing diseases. One of these expensive prescriptions consist of very costly ingredients. White and red coral, rubies or jacinth, pearls, emeralds, musk, with one or two nerves in special quantities, are crushed into powder, rolled into pills with gum and rose-water, and coated with gold-leaf. This unique medicine is reported to be an infallible cure for small-pox, measles, scarlet fever, and all diseases which arise from blood-poisoning and break out in cutaneous eruptions. The strengthening qualities of this preparation are said to be quite remarkable. The Jesuits, who flourished in the early part of the present imperial dynasty, affirm that they have seen men snatched from the last convulsions of death by its judicious use.

Another remedy is called Kinchia, or bitter wine. This seems to be a strong tonic, and is not really of Chinese origin, as it is supposed to have been brought from India. It consists of spirits, aloes, myrrh, frankincense, and saffron. These are to be mixed, and exposed to the sun for a month until the fluid becomes clear enough to be used.

The following is the prescription for a Chinese love-potion, but it is understood to be only a burlesque of some of their ordinary medical prescriptions: Take the pistils of a white peony which has bloomed in the spring—of a white lotus that had bloomed in the summer—of a white poppy that had bloomed in the autumn, and of a white plum blossom that had blossomed in the winter; of each of these, twelve ounces. The pistils are to be kept over till the vernal equinox of the succeeding year, dried in the sun, mixed into powder, and dissolved in twelve mace-weight of rain, and the same amount of pure dew, hoar-frost, and snow-flakes, all of which must have fallen on a particular day. These ingredients being mixed in equal proportions, they are to be made into pills the size of a dragon's eye and placed in an old porcelain jar, which is to be buried under the root of a flower. When the love-sick patient feels unwell, she is to dig up the jar and swallow one of the pills in a hot decoction of juniper bark. The Chinese author has omitted to state what effect is produced by this potion on either the love-sick maiden or her lover. But he proceeds to observe that the prescription is also good for some cases of toothache, only, he adds, as it takes some time to procure all the ingredients of the remedy, some patients have been known to die, and others have been cured spontaneously, before they could try its effect.

Under these circumstances, it is not astonishing to learn that the medical profession is held in rather low esteem in China. It is an hereditary profession, which receives few recruits from outside, and therefore prefers to stand on its own ancient ways and traditions.

SMUGGLING.

The dullness of the average conscience in respect to smuggling is a matter that has long attracted the attention of those accustomed to distinguish between the moral quality of actions. Many persons who are strictly honest in their dealings with their neighbors and who would feel greatly distressed if they had wronged one out of a dollar, will without any apparent compunction, if the opportunity presents itself, defraud the Government, which means the people collectively, of the duty that may be imposed upon any article they may wish to import. It is not easy to account for this peculiar feature, unless it be that in the one case the person wronged can be held up before the mind as an individual, while in the other case the wrong is done to so great a number, and each person suffers so slightly, by it that it seems to the wrong-doer to be no offence at all. The reasoning though specious is very fallacious, for if there be any difference in the gravity of the offence the greatest wrong is that which affects the greatest number. Just now our neighbors are complaining that many Canadian traders along the north-west boundary are smuggling goods across the border into the United States. It is claimed that owing to the smallness of the customs service thousands of bushels of potatoes are rushed into the United States without paying a duty. The inducement to smuggle potatoes is great as they bring good prices in the States. It is a considerable loss to the government however, since the tariff on potatoes is 25 cents a bushel. This conduct on the part of our fellow citizens is greatly to be regretted though it is difficult to discover any method to effectually prevent it. Those who have respect for law and for the rights of others ought to frown upon the practice so as to disturb at least the consciences of those who practice the dishonesty. Good neighborhood requires that we shall do no less.

NOTES HERE AND THERE.

Items of General Interest to Free Press Readers.

"WHO WARDE GEMMAN?"

The sleeping-car porter faithfully gathers his "2 50 cents all round." But as faithfully carries out his orders when the money is in sight. The Hartford Post tells how some man found it out by bitter experience.

"The president of one of our insurance companies, just returned from a Western trip relates the following good story: "On the train going from Chicago to Dubuque, Iowa, was a passenger in one of the sleeping-cars, who had been drinking heavily, but realized the fact that he was intoxicated. As he was about to retire without disrobing he called a porter to him and, handing out a dollar, requested to be wakened up at Rockford, Ill., and said he: 'Be sure you put me off, whether I wish to or not. I know I'm pretty full and when I am in this condition I'm likely to fight, but don't mind that, just put me off and it will be all right."

"The colored porter promised to do so, and the man was soon asleep in his berth."

"Early next morning, as the train was nearing Dubuque and the passengers were hurriedly dressing, the colored porter was attending his duties with his head bandaged, one eye closed and his face showing hard usage."

"Just then the Rockford passenger crawled out of his berth, looked out to get his bearings and then went for the porter: 'Look here, you ——, what does this mean? Didn't I tell you to put me off at Rockford, you —— ?'

"The darky looked at him astonished and says: 'Is you dat gemman what wanted to be put off?'

"'Yes, I'm de one, you ——, and I gave you a dollar to see to it?'

"'Well, if you's de gemman what give me dat dollar, what I wanter know is dis yer, who was de gemman dat I put off at Rockford?'"

INDIANS VERSUS THE LOCOMOTIVES.

"When the Kansas Pacific was first opened," relates Mr. H. Vedder, a locomotive engineer, the Indians were very hostile, and there was constant fear that they would wreck the trains that they did not in due to their ignorance of the iron horse and the best methods of destroying it. One of my firemen had an experience with the Cheyennes which he will never forget. He was on the road near Fort Wallace, when he saw that the Indians had cut the telegraph wire, and knew that he might look out for squalls. They were never satisfied with cutting the wire, but chopped into inch pieces with their tomahawks to stop effectually the mysterious message. As the train came near a large patch of sunflowers which grew on both sides of the track, and over 100 Indians rose up, and stretched a strong rope across the track, braced themselves, and prepared to receive the shock of the locomotive. As was afterwards learned, they had taken raw hide strips, braced them together, and, with a force of fifty at each end of the rope, thought they would be able to stop the train. The instant the locomotive struck the rope the air was full of Indians. They were thrown in all directions. Some were jerked clear across the train, and more than a dozen were killed or severely injured. This was the last attempt made for years to stop the train.

Their Part of the Service.

There was a row in the church, and the disaffected boss had gathered in a turbulent crowd outside, while two policemen guarded the door on the inside.

"What is to be done with all those people collected out there?" said the policemen, appealing to the pastor.

"Why," he coolly replied, "we expect you to go out and take up the collection."

And he did and quelled the disturbance.

Mrs. Partington in Kansas.

"Are you the judge of reprobates?" said an old lady Saturday as she walked into Judge Monahan's office. "I am the judge of probate," was the reply. "Well, that's it, I expect," quoth the old lady. "You see, my husband died detested, and left me several little infidels, and I want to be their executioner."

"Don't Care to Eat."

It is with the greatest confidence that Hood's Sarsaparilla is recommended for loss of appetite, indigestion, sick headache, and similar troubles. This medicine gently tones the stomach, assists digestion, and makes one "real hungry." Persons in delicate health, after taking Hood's Sarsaparilla a few days, find themselves longing for and eating the plainest food with unexpected relish.

Health, Happiness and Prosperity.

All these depend on pure blood, for without it health is impossible; without health happiness is impossible, and without happiness prosperity is a mockery. No means of obtaining pure blood and removing bad blood excels the use of B.B.B., the best blood purifier known.

The lady—Jack why don't you write a book or paint a picture or do something clever? The gentleman—Because I selected a millionaire for a father, and I think that was clever enough to last a lifetime.

"Hunger is the Best Sauce."

As a rule, a person who has a good appetite has good health. But how many there are who enjoy nothing they eat, and sit down to meals only as an unpleasant duty. Nature's antidotes for this condition are so happily combined in Hood's Sarsaparilla that it soon restores good digestion, creates an appetite and revitalizes the blood so that the beneficial effect of good food is imparted to the whole body. Truly hunger is the best sauce, and Hood's Sarsaparilla induces hunger.

The Grand Trunk System.

The Grand Trunk system differs from the human system in that the same troubles do not affect it and the same remedies are not needed. For all diseases of the human system there is no tonic purifier, renovator and strengthener as good as Burdock Blood Bitters. A weak system can be built up by B.B.B.

"Jones, did you ever have any interest in the public stocks?" "Why, y-e-s, sir. I stood in 'em once about four hours."

Why It Is Popular.

Because it has proven its absolute merit over and over again, because it has an unequal record of cures, because its business is conducted in a thoroughly honest manner, and because it combines economy and strength, being the only medicine of which "100 Doses One Dollar" is true—these strong points have made Hood's Sarsaparilla the most successful medicine of the day.

What's The Reason.

The causes of summer complaint, diarrhœa, dysentery, cholera morbus, etc., are the excessive heat, eating green fruit overexertion, impure water and sudden chill. Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry is an infallible and prompt cure for all bowel complaints from whatever cause.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the forerunner of more dangerous disorder. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a neglected cold, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.
