Improvements in the Manufacture of Watches. A few years ago we thought there was nothing left about watches that could be mproved on, that the Waltham and Elgin had left nothing undone to make a perfect imepiece, but atperience proved that the balance wheel being so near the centre came right under the weakest part of the case, and watchmakers have been making dollar after dollar by replacing broken Miss Meds Nelson, of Guelph, visited fewels caused by the pressure of the case on the bridge over the balance, while the wearer was leaning against some sharp corner or a knock with the handle of some tool. Watchmakers also found that the balance wheel being over the mainspring barrel, prevented the taking out of that part whou needed for any repairs without first removing the balance wheel which it Mr. Thomas Camerou speut several days is unwise to do if not really necessary, for many reasons. First the fact of altering the running rate, causing the necessity of regulating the watch over again. | Becoud, the imposibility of any workman, no matter how skillful, putting the balance pivote into their lawels without working in some of the dirt which had gathered around the edges of the holes and which would not be doing any harm unless the balance pushed, it into the holes when being put in place. Thirdly, the danger of damage to the pivote and hairspring while being put in position by careless of inferior workmen, and even watchmakers are careless sometimes. Now the Walt. ham and Elgin factories have done nothing towards remedying this defeat In the movemeate, but other factories have, notably the Columbur, Duber Hempden and the Rockford. Each of these have evaded Mr. Robt. Anderson, of Mount Porest, this fault by moving the belauce from the Mr. Jno. C. Nelson, who has been indis- part in the centre. This improvement posed for several weeks, is able to be around Talso allows the mainspring barrel to be removed without touching belance in any Miss Stodiert, who has been away for way. The Rockford Watch Company the round of the case instead of the springy make it next to impossible to break the balance, jewels or pivote, by pressure on the case. This they have accomplished by turning away some of the plate and lowering the balance, which cannot be done with those movements whose balance is in the centre, because of the mainspring barrel which is under it. The lowering of the belance in the Rockford allows room for making the bridge much thicker, which has been done. They also make the barrel bridge out of a solid block, only turning out of it enough to make room for the barrel, leaving it very much stronger than the other makers. The Rockford has also had great success with their new means of taking up the wear of the balance pivots. No attempt by any other watch company has been made to find a means by which a watch repairer could prevent the balance steff from jumping back and forward from end to end of the jewel holes. Each step the wearer takes and the more play the pivote have the worse they get fixtened on the ends, making the watch go irregularly and perhaps stop .. All pivots of balances must wear in time, more especially if the watch raus too long without cleaning.
