A Halton Breach of Promise Case. A breach of promise case, McGowan Stevenson, was heard and settled at. Toronto on Monday. Miss Nellie McGowan of Oakville, a c mely young lady in her 23rd year, swore that in 1890 J. W. Stevenson, a farmer living near Whithy. had promised to marry her, that amorous letters had prased between them, and she showed the jury her engagement ring. The young lady's mother stated that she received Stevenson as her daughter's future husband, and that he had told her be was the owner of a |well-stocked 100acre farm, besides money in the bank.

The defence was unrepresented, and on the evidence for the protecution the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff assessing damages at $1400.
