The Young Folks.

ACROSS THE FIELD.

Across the dewy field she goes
Alone upon her summer's day,
And toward her bends the sweet wild rose
That grows beside her on her way.

O'er hills and through wild woods, blow
And under the morning sun she went,
And gold and crimson petals flew
Against the fair's gleaming white.

But down the winded path she alit,
Where slender grasses sway and swing,
Thriffling from caroles, curving lips
A song to cheer her way.

And still her soft goings bring
And all the fair now follow her,
Then in the bower sit down
And all my summer goes with her.

—Roxana Stevens.

GRACE DARLING.

Where the Heroine of the Surf Lies Buried.

Fifty-three years ago, October 25, Grace Horsey Darling, the heroine of the Longship lighthouse, died. The heroic girl, small in stature, of a consumptive, fragile constitution, accomplished the rescue of the steamship Forfarshire on the night of September 7, 1883, by sheer force of will, pluck and determination. All that now remains to tell the tale of Grace Darling is those of this generation is the modest tombstone in the old churchyard of Bamburgh, Northumberland. Upon it are inscribed these words: "Grace Horsey Darling, born November 20, 1815; steamship Forfarshire wrecked September 7, 1883; died October 25, 1862, aged 26 years."

Under the canopy covering the tomb Grace Darling's tiny legs are carved in stone. The face is sweet and girlish, the pose of the slender figure is graceful, as with the hands folded over her breast, her arm encircles an ear, the emblem of her greatness. In that little grass-grown churchyard Grace lies in her quiet state, close to the picturesque village, with its white-walled, thatched roof cottages clustering at the foot of the grim old castle on the verge of the sea.

Standing within the castle keep, dark as the night may be one can always see the revolving light of the Longstone lighthouse shedding its intermittent gleams upon the black water, to warn mariners of the sunken rocks and perilous passages surrounding the group of islands known as the Outer and Inner Farne. Here is this light-house tower Grace was living in 1883, when the ship struck upon the Harker's rock, and it was from thence, aided by the noblest heroic mother, who pushed off their little boat, that the father and daughter set through the blinding storm to rescue the shipwreck crew.—Tray Scudard.

PIN-MONEY.

"Here is your pin-money, Maud," said Uncle Hugh, as he handed his niece a bright silver dollar.

"Thank you, uncle; I was just wishing for some pin change," said Maud's eyes fairly beamed as she took the offered money.

"Uncle Hugh, when you give me money to spend just as I please, why do you always call it 'pin-money'?" Maud asked.

"Well, my dear, I will tell you the origin of the term 'pin-money.' Pins were introduced into England by Catherine first wife of Henry VIII. They were not, however, the well-known small-pointed instruments such as we use, but were made of gold, silver, ivory, and brass, many of them weighing six or eight ounces. Such pins as those were worn in the hair and used on different parts of the clothing to fasten folds or draperies, and were quite ornamental. Thus, you see, the first pins were much more useful to ladies than gentlemen. The Spanish manufacturers were permitted to sell their pins only during the Christmas holidays, and in that way gentlemen began to give the ladies of their respective families money at Christmastime with which to buy pins. At first they were very expensive, costing as much as a man's daily wages to pay for a valuable piece of jewelry. However, pins had become common and cheap, and were no longer confined to the practice of giving their wives, daughters, and sisters money to buy pins; in that way the term 'pin-money' originated and is now applied to an allowance made a lady to buy any small articles she may need or desire."

"I am glad you told me all about it, uncle," said Maud; "and I thank you very much."—Harper's Young People.

Wanted to Repeat It.

A certain small boy had told a lie. Very sadly his mother reproved him for it, and to help him to resist temptation, she said: "Now, my boy, if you ever feel like telling a lie again, come to mamma, and she will help you fight against it."

The lad went off with a sober face. Only a few moments elapsed, however, before he appeared again, with an eager smile said: "Mamma, I want to tell a lie."

"Well, my dear, tell me what you want to say," said the mother.

"I want to tell that same old lie over again," observed the boy.—Harper's Magazine.

Different Manners.

His City Niço—Uncle, don't! It's very impudent to eat with knife. Uncle Elihu—Hàng impudent! I let you eat with your fork when you came out to Penikville this summer, didn't I, and never let on funny how it looked to us—Puck!

MONEY TO LEND—Attention is called to the card in another column of Mitchell & Jackson, real estate, loan and insurance agents, Guelph.

Little Men and Little Women sometimes suffer from worms. Worm's Worm Syrup is very highly recommended as a cure.
