

The Acton Free Press.

VOLUME XVIII.—NO. 18.

ACTON, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1893.

PRICE THREE CENTS.

The Acton Free Press

EVERY THURSDAY MORNING.
Free Press and Printing Office.
WILL STREET, ACTON, ONT.
TRADE OF PUBLICATION—One dollar per year in advance. All subscriptions discount when the time for which they have been paid has expired. The date to which every subscription is paid is denoted on the address label.
ADVERTISING RATES—Transient advertising, one cent per square line for first insertion, and one-half cent for each subsequent insertion.
CONTRACT RATES—The following table shows the rates for the insertion of advertisements for specific periods:
1 Week, 10 Lines, 10 Cents
1 Month, 10 Lines, 35 Cents
3 Months, 10 Lines, 1.00
6 Months, 10 Lines, 1.75
1 Year, 10 Lines, 3.00
Advertisements without specific directions will be inserted until ordered otherwise. Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance. Advertisements will be charged each week unless otherwise directed. A month's composition must be paid for at regular rates.
Changes for contract advertisements must be in the office by noon on Tuesday.
H. P. MOORE,
Editor and Proprietor.

Every week we are getting NEW EFFECTS IN INGRAIN PAPER, with BORDERS and CEILINGS to MATCH. These papers are used by the best families. They are as cheap as the common papers—ONLY 5 CTS A ROLL—and much handsomer. When you are in GUELPH call at DAY'S BOOKSTORE and see how nice and cheap they are.
DAY SELLS CHEAP

Bank of Montreal

CAPITAL $12,000,000
RENT 6,000,000
A SAVINGS DEPARTMENT Has been opened in connection with this Branch.
Interest Allowed at Current Rates.
JAS. H. FINLAY,
Manager GUELPH BRANCH.
W. BARBER & BROS.
PAPER MAKERS,
GEORGETOWN, ONT.
MAKERS SPECIALTY OF
Machine Finished Book Papers
HIGH GRADE WEEKLY NEWS.

Business Directory.

J. FUREN, M.D.C.M.
Dentist and residence—Corner Mill & Frederick streets, Acton.
S. A. McNEAGUE, M.D.
Graduate of Trinity College, Member of College of Physicians and Surgeons, Licentiate of Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, Licentiate of College of Dentists, Toronto.
Office—Residence—Dr. Lavery's late residence, head of Frederick Street, Acton.
J. E. WILKINSON, D.D.S., L.D.S., D.S.
Graduate University of Toronto, Member of College of Dentists, Toronto.
Office over the drug store, Acton.
L. BENNETT, L.D.S., DENTIST,
GEORGETOWN, ONTARIO.
M. LEAN & McLEAN
Barristers, Solicitors, Notaries, Conveyancers &c. Private Funds to Loan.
Office—Town Hall, Acton.
W. A. McLEAY, J. A. McLEAY.
J. A. MOWAT,
Barrister, Solicitor, Notary Public.
Money to Loan.
Office—Data—Tuesday and Saturday.
Office—Kensington Block, Acton, up stairs.
R. J. McNEAB,
GOVERNMENT COLLECTOR, ETC.
RENTS AND ACCOUNTS COLLECTED, FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE. Property bought and sold. Loans to borrowers on the best terms.
Office—J. A. MOWAT'S OFFICE, Acton.
SHILTON, WALLBRIDGE & STONE,
Barristers, Solicitors &c.
Toronto and Georgetown.
Office—Crescent Block, Georgetown, and Town Hall, Acton.
JAMES HUTCHESON,
Land Surveyor and Civil Engineer.
Office adjoining a Messrs. Macdonald's street, Acton.
PATENTS SECURED FOR INVENTIONS.
HENRY GRIST, OTTAWA, CANADA.
Twenty Years Practice. No Patent, No Fee.
W. M. HEMSTREET,
LICENSED ACTIONER
For the Counties of Wellington and Halton. Orders for the Patent Office, Acton, or by registered letter to Acton, will be promptly attended to. Terms reasonable.
Also expert in loan on the most favorable terms, and at the lowest rates of interest to sums of $500 and upwards.
JOHN DAY, ARCHITECT,
Office—Wyndham Street, Guelph, Ont.
FRANCIS NUNAN
BOOKBINDER.
Wyndham St., Guelph, Ontario.
Over Williams Store.
All kinds of books made to order. Personal attention given to all orders. Promptly delivered.
THE HANLAN BARBER SHOP,
MILL STREET, ACTON.
An experienced, stylish hair-cutting, post-graduate in all the latest styles. Always ready to please. All work guaranteed satisfactory.
J. H. WARDEN, Proprietor.
JOB PRINTING,
INCLUDING: Book, Pamphlet, Report, Bill, Head, Circular, Etc., etc. Executed in the style. Collectors of Woodcuts and other short notices. Apply or address.
H. P. MOORE,
Free Press Office, Acton.
AGENTS WANTED
In every Township.
To sell "The Pictorial Cyclopedia of Live Stock and Complete Stock Doctor."
The most complete and comprehensive work ever published. In all the leading cities of their profession and a continental reputation. Worth its price in gold to any one having Horses, Sheep, Cattle, Swine, Poultry, Dogs, etc. A grand opportunity to make money. Secure territory at once. Address
E. N. MOYER, Publisher,
120 Yonge St. Toronto.

The Traders' Bank OF CANADA

Statement taken from Government Returns, November 30th, 1892.

ASSETS.
Capital	$1,000,000
Reserve	1,000,000
Deposits with Government to secure	100,000
Deposits with other banks	100,000
Notes and Cheques of other banks	100,000
Call Loans on Stocks and Bonds	100,000
Balance Due from other Banks	100,000
Government Securities	100,000
Accounts Receivable	100,000
Real Estate	100,000
Other Assets	100,000
Total Assets	4,714,000

LIABILITIES.
Deposits on Call	1,000,000
Deposits on Demand	1,000,000
Notes in Circulation	100,000
Deposits from Public	100,000
Deposits from other Banks	100,000
Total Liabilities	4,714,000

Clearing Sale

Winter Boots, Shoes, Rubbers and Overshoes.
Reduced Prices
Previous to stock taking.
TRUNKS & VALISES at the lowest prices in the city.
W. McLaren & Co.,
Leading Boot & Shoe Store,
C/O GUELPH.

Graduation

FROM THE
GUELPH Business College
MEANS
Enterprise,
Character,
Capacity,
Success.

Money to Lend

Good Farm Security
Lower Rate of Interest and on Better Terms of Repayment.
This year better offered in Canada.
Intending Borrowers
Should write or call at once and be convinced before applying to any other.
W. S. JACKSON,
Real Estate, Loan & Insurance Agent
GUELPH, CANADA.

New Planing Mill

Sash and Door Factory.
John Cameron, Contractor.
Has fitted up the building on Main Street, lately occupied as a truck factory, with machinery and tools for planing sash, doors, mouldings and estimates for all kinds of building and carpentering work.
MATCHING, LEAD MOULDING.
—MAKE ALL SIZES OF—
Sashes, Doors and Windows and Door Frames and Dressing Rooms.
And keep a stock on hand. All orders promptly attended to.
JOHN CAMERON,
Action

FURNITURE.

We will quote to you any size of bed room, dining room, or parlor furniture. We will also quote to you any size of bed room, dining room, or parlor furniture. We will also quote to you any size of bed room, dining room, or parlor furniture.
THE HANLAN BARBER SHOP,
MILL STREET, ACTON.

OUR BABY CARRIAGES

Are the finest ever seen in the city. Just see them. We handle the Celebrated High Chair.
Newcombe's Planos
BOYS AND MEN'S BICYCLES.
Will be a little later. Wait for us. We are going to put new life into town, and in good shape.
P. SPRAGGE,
The People's Popular Furniture Store
Upper Wyndham St.
Guelph.
We pay freight on all bills amounting to $5.

ACTON LIVERY

BUS LINE.
The undersigned respectfully solicits the patronage of the public, and informs them that he has a well equipped and stylish rig on wheels.
At his stable, a comfortable bed room, a bath, and a good kitchen, and a good stable.
JOHN WILLIAMS.

Poetry

THE LAST GLASS.

A merry song, a carol through
Where flowers cluster, and the sun
Fills up the hours;
There's nothing rough and hoarse
And fairer boys, within the den
Of SILENCE'S power.
One came after as the rest,
To share the flowing wine and rest,
With jubilee air;
As if pursued by SILENCE'S hand,
He sought the place where drink and dish
Were laid around.
One night the usual glass was poured
Amid the rest, and SILENCE'S hand
Was laid around.
By those who heard
The poem almost recited his lips—
A sudden fall a general start—
The floor and floor.
He says: "Will you another glass;
Here's to all here."
He lifted up the glass again,
A sudden fall a general start—
The floor and floor.
"Boys, and the voice was hoarse with drink,
"I cannot drink this glass," he said—
A sudden fall a general start—
The floor and floor.
A laugh from those—and then his face
A sudden fall a general start—
The floor and floor.
"I never saw anything like it, in all my life," he cried, when at last he put in an eye.
"I never saw anything like it, in all my life," he cried, when at last he put in an eye.
"I never saw anything like it, in all my life," he cried, when at last he put in an eye.

Select Family Reading.

No Necessity for It.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Miller, "I'm awfully glad that you're going to live in the country. I've always wanted a country home."
"My dear," said Miss Primrose, "I never heard you say so before."
"I thought," remarked Mrs. Miller, "that you would be surprised, Cecilia, but you see, you must have been married. You don't understand what a deal of managing men take. If I had told Octavius that I wanted to live in the country, he would have said to himself—'merely for the sake of Octavius to conjure up forty different ones of it, and he would have been the thing! Now that has suggested the idea myself, I have only to acquiesce, don't you see?'"
Mrs. Miller was a plump, comfortable young woman, with bright blue eyes, blonde hair and a fair, serene forehead. If I had not been married, I would have been the best of husbands. Mrs. Miller was a small, sharp-featured, nervous man, who went through life on the private detective principle, always looking out for hidden motives or secret plots.
"I never should have any peace of my life, if I had not been married," said Octavius, "I have a deal of trouble about my wife. Octavius said there was no necessity for any woman having domestic trials of that nature. He says a servant can be selected from an intelligent class, and he can be trained to do anything. He says a penny nail from ten-penny packages. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."
Mrs. Miller received her friend with a welcoming smile.
"So glad to see you, dear," said she. "Come into the back room, where we can be a little quieter."
Mrs. Primrose, glancing apprehensively around, "Somebody appears to be disagreeing violently with somebody else."
"It's Octavius and his tableman," explained Mrs. Miller, the least shadow of a smile curving her perfect red lips. "Octavius is the straightest and best manager for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated. He's full of theories, but I hardly think they would work in real life. Oh, yes, I'm charmed with the idea of a country home. Do come and see us, Cecilia, when we're settled."
Miss Primrose went away, much marvelling.
"Arabella is a girl of talent," she said to herself. "I've always had faith in her, and she needs to win all the school prizes, and manage the household without any help. I don't think she'll ever find out anything about the business! But really Mrs. Miller must be a great trial!"
The Miller family had scarcely inhabited their new home a week, before Mrs. Primrose put on her new spring hat and drove down to the school. She was for the suburban station where Saxford Lodge was situated.
"Dear me," soliloquized she, "it's quite a big place! With a double bay-window, and a lawn, and a stone-rimmed sun ideal in front of the door. And there's dear Bell at the window, all smiles."<