Poetry
GOODS MANNERS.
At home and in society
We try to be our duty.
And make our lives as bright and true
As the stars in the sky.
We stand with all our heart,
And try to do our part.
We stand with all our heart,
And try to do our part.

THE GOSSIPERS WILLIAMS OF GOSSVILLE.
There are many Gossippers scattered about the country. One can scarcely go fifty miles in any direction without coming upon a Gossiper. From some cause or other, the name has been omitted by the poets, and untravellers personally possibly consider the "Gossiper" a "villain." It is a pity that the name is not more generally used, for it is a name which is well deserved. The Gossiper is a man who is always ready to tell you the latest news of his neighbors. He is a man who is always ready to tell you the latest news of his neighbors. He is a man who is always ready to tell you the latest news of his neighbors.

OLD DIAMONDS, ETC., AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.
Perhaps the most beautiful display of old diamonds ever seen in this country was at the World's Fair. The diamonds were of all sizes and shapes, and were of the finest quality. They were of the finest quality. They were of the finest quality. They were of the finest quality.

ONLY A LITTLE WHILE.
Only a little while to go,
A long long time to see,
The old from the new, the new from the old,
The old from the new, the new from the old.

THE OLD MAN IN THE PANSIES.
Maggie's mother tells me in the Dublin House the following pretty fable about the pansy. I have found them, and you can do so, if you follow my directions. I have you ever heard the pansy story? I have you ever heard the pansy story? I have you ever heard the pansy story?
