

NATURALLY NIGHT
The little girl has all in a row.
Ready for children on the surface, you know.
Washing her face and little black feet.
With them ready and fit to be seen.
Putting them between her hands and white.
That's what mothers are doing to-night.
Hoping out how in the little ones' eyes.
Lying by their side with words through their ears.
Looking for germs to find and then—
Who but a mother knows how to begin changing a bottle to make it look right—
That is what mothers are doing to-night.
Calling the little ones round her chair.
Hearing them hum, hum, hum, hum, hum, hum,
Telling them over the top of their heads.
How their little feet should be in the bed.
Watching them lie with childish delight.
That is what mothers are doing to-night.
Ogling to see if they have fast asleep.
After the little ones are fast asleep.
Any one to know if the children are warm?
"Oh, the little ones are warm as a plum."
Kisses each little face, nose and bright—
That is what mothers are doing to-night.
Knocking down gently beneath the white bed.
Leaving and coming back to see if they are
"Oh, the little ones are warm as a plum."
That is what mothers are doing to-night.

BOY AGAIN.
The director of one of our large corporations was in the habit of prowling around the office. One morning he happened to come across the dinner-pail of the office boy. He curiously took it to take off the cover. A slice of home-made bread, two doughnuts and a piece of apple pie tempted the millionaire's appetite. He became a boy again, and the dinner pail seemed to be one he carried sixty years ago.
Just then the office boy came in and surprised the old man eating the pie. He had finished the bread and the doughnuts.
"That's my dinner you're eating!" said the boy.
"Yes, sonny, I suspect it may be; but it's the first rate one for all that. I've not eaten so good a one for sixty years."

PAY AS YOU GO.
There are many good men with strict honest intentions, who allow themselves to practice a certain species of selfish injustice so pernicious in its effects, that the injury they inflict upon society at large, but more especially upon their employees, is almost incalculable. We refer to men who are dilatory in paying their just debts men who do not pay as they go—men, in short, who, for the sake of avoiding a little inconvenience to themselves, or making a little interest on their money, do not hesitate to inflict upon their helpless victims an amount of misery, from the idea of which they pass to estimate the enormity. It is a great aggravation of this offence that the sufferers from it are usually the most needy and most hard working members of the community. The dilatory paymaster to whom we refer would do well to ponder over St. Paul's wise counsel, "Give no one anything," as well as upon John Ruskin's pithy advice, "Pay as you go."

THE MERITS OF THE COUNTRY SCHOOL.
There is more reading done in our neighborhood than in our cities, and the good typical farm home has its newspapers always and its magazines quite frequently. Not are the district schools inferior, though their quality varies much from year to year. With a good teacher in charge, the country district school is better than the city graded school, because it is more free from mere machinery, more individualized, and the individuality of pupils. Hundreds of men and women of high standing and wide experience to day are thankful for the little wooden country school-house of their childhood days, in which the educational methods pursued were infinitely more scientific and valuable than those now followed in many of our city schools.

Fine Birds and Fine Featherers.
People who have means generally dress well, it is true, but there are exceptions, and those who judge the position of a stranger by their attire are sometimes greatly mistaken. Occasionally they will find great things in the most unassuming garments, and sometimes splendidly arrayed gorgeous dresses and jewels will be paid for, and the milliner is sometimes pleased to see them.

It is very odd, my dear, and an old lady, one very hot day, to a friend I can't bear the heat in summer, and in winter I love it.
On the occasion of Mr. Ross's lecture, "The Science of the Human Body," he said that he claims to be, as we have seen, using it for years, both internally and externally, and have always received benefit from its use. It is our family medicine, and I take great pleasure in recommending it.

THE HUMAN INFLUENZA
Upon the weather is accepted by some as a real, by others as a diabolical. The moon is regarded as a cause of the disease, and the sun as a cause of the disease. The influenza is a disease of the human system, and it is a disease of the human system. It is a disease of the human system, and it is a disease of the human system.

Belie-la Mr. Lagford
I have been cured of my troubles by the use of your medicine. I was unable to work from two to four days every week. Having used your medicine I was cured of my troubles. I began to use it and I was cured of my troubles. I began to use it and I was cured of my troubles.
