Poetry.

A PLACE IN THE WORLD.

Every place in the world
Has its own life and soul,
Every place in the world
Has its own story to tell,
With its own joys and sorrows,
With its own hopes and fears,
With its own joys and sorrows,
With its own hopes and fears.

TEMPERANCE TALK.

The New York Christian of Work, one of the ablest of all the American religious papers writes: "In the sphere of temperance reform the work is done in Ontario, Canada, in the most ardent and encouraging manner. So here and there the light is breaking all around the horizon, and the truth and righteousness are prevailing in spite of all the devices of selfish and evil men."

IF I WERE A GROCER.

If I were a grocer, says a writer in Amos, I would have the approach to my place of business as attractive that passes by would be forced to stop and look at my display of goods, and an attractive display of goods, I would have the store floor, counters, shelves and fixtures bright and clean as a new broom. I would have the best goods on the market and pay particular attention to offering my customers the very best possible value for their money. I would have neat, courteous and gentlemanly clerks, ready for their customers, friendly, honest and efficient. I would try to be out of the groove in every day's work. I would have a systematic and high grade service. I would credit to every deserving applicant, and, in order to speed up my business, I would have a first-class credit department, where the record and standing of every customer was scrutinized and watched. I would render all bills and accounts regularly and pay strict attention to all collections. I would buy for cash, even though I had to buy frequently and in small lots. I would catch every possible discount. I would be up to date in all my business. I would not be behind in my bills. I would be in the room when the customer comes. I would go for the best quality of goods. I would be in the habit of looking up the prices of all the goods I sell. I would be in the habit of looking up the prices of all the goods I sell.

CHILDREN AS REFORMERS.

I do not think the churches and Sunday schools are "now doing as much as they might do, or even as much as they need do, in the direction of temperance work among children."

GOOD ADVICE.

Pay attention to character. It is the backbone of the business. It is the backbone of the business. It is the backbone of the business.

The Judge's Story

"Aunt Sarah" said the late eminent Judge M. "At a fashionable party where we dined in abundance 'Young man, put down that glass! There is death in it!'"

REWARD THE DESEVING EMPLOYEE.

A clerk complained that he found his willingness to work always rewarded with a double dose. Now there is more truth in this than the average grocer is willing to admit.

MIRACLES MADE EASY.

In a certain church in London a young priest was detained to preach. The sermon was his first appearance and he looked for his life. The tone of the multi-voiced choir. And then all of a sudden with 10,000 voices of boys and young men, an old member of the congregation said, "That's an miracle, I repeat."
