The Young Folks.

IF WE HAD UNDERSTOOD,

Our love had not been understood.

Life's deeper meaning and its greater good

Were it not sweet.

To understand the best.

Stray from the path in that fair innocence of boyhood.

To find the pearl gem.

It is the pearl of wisdom.

The pearl of the day.

May sometimes softly drift away.

Revealing to our faith a greater good.

O, mother how, if we but understood!

Dear mother, if long ago they tiny feet had gone.

Forever from thy heart to leave another,

were the dawn.

Then the final safety never left the tiny baby foot.

Or galling, trust they left upon thy heart,

little empty slot.

Dear mother, when again to you,

And Heaven's white for the shadows they are,

passing through.

We made the darkness, tho', that made the light!

What made us all a modicum tenderly,

With strength the night?

Feast not the heart were only dark.

Whom wrong, alone, we mark.

No better, direst thing clings no heavier,

Where no the leather feet, too.

Must tread, a moment lost unto the night.

Which brings their footsteps to some greater pose.

O, elsewhere, if we but understood!

Our every great gift of worth, that beauty only may endure.

Which, sorrow, darkly, as a burning metal,

There were no hours so sweet.

To grace the baby feet.

That kiss, the last, the last stocking of his spells, for off to school.

As to that which darkly waits,

Bright and pleasant, before the power

Through that darkness to the greater good.

Alas! O mother, how, if we but understood!

Change Inter Ocean.

TOO MANY PRICES.

There are a number of men to my knowledge who have three or four different prices on their goods. I have often been in stores where a clerk would call out, "What's the price?" "What's it for?" thus shoving that the price depends on who was the purchaser, and in course to cause people to pay more.

A price charged by one man is never accused of overcharging; his clerk is never accused for not charging enough, and creates a confidence that one price is the only price. Take it home to yourselves. Do you have confidence in buying from a public whom you know has a number of prices, and don't feel safer in buying from a drammer who gives you the lowest quotation at one, and don't want for you to beat him down. The best down is so rooted that public and persons are prepared for it. True that some men would give twenty dollars gold, price for ten dollars, we are not all alike.

W. Beecher once said: "If you attempt to beat a man down and get his goods at less than a fair price you are attempting to commit a burglary as much as though you broke into his shop to take things without paying for them. There is cheating on both sides of the counter, and generally less behind it than before." — Grocer's Advocate.

Every Day Farm Philosophy.

This more you live yourself the less you are likely to live others.

A trifling dig is generally not half as trifling as the man who keeps him.

Some folks kick a horse every time they enter his stall, and then wonder why he does not love them.

The stalk of corn that grows the tallest and appears the most conspicuous, nearly always bears a blasted ear.

Prodigality is no sign of generosity. It rather indicates a narrowness of both mind and heart too contracted to comprehend the true value of things.

If a man would lose as much as possible as though to pay in prayer meeting, he would not have nearly so much complaint of hard times to make.

The man who will spend the most time in the harwest time, talking politics, is generally the one who is the least account to either himself, his neighbors or the government.

An Even Thing.

A letter to a bank in New York reports the following incident:

A German citizen, approaching the window, requested that a cheque payable to the order of Schweitzer could be cashed.

"I am sorry to say," said the teller, "I am unable to answer to the letter's look of inquiry."

"But I don't know that you are Mr. Schweitzer. You must just yourself identified," said the teller.

"How you do?" asked the German with a pulled face.

"You must get some one to identify you repeated the bank officer. 'I don't know you you.'

"Ah, yes!" cried Hans, quite relieved, "that's all right. I don't know you neither."

A SUGGESTIVE TABLE.

On the main street of a certain town a citizen and a mad dog with a long tail. Many of the passes by were bitten, some were dying. The citizen in consultation said: "We must found a hospital, and fit it out with the most approved apparatus for the cure of hydrocephalus." So the hospital was built and kept full. A plain man suggested: "Why build a hospital? better kill the dog!" "Kill the dog!" exclaimed one of the taxpayers, "don't you know, sir, that man pays well to keep that dog there?"

Now, the dog is hiper and the town is American.

IN GUARDING ONE OF UNCLE SAM'S PORTALS

RELATING HIS EXPENSIVE PORTFOLIO

WOMAN'S DISSEPARATE MEDICAL ASSOCIATION.

Dear Sirs—We are sorry to inform you that we have been informed by all the dispensers accompanying such a number of medicines I have used in abundance; they only afford me pleasure.

Mr. Pierce's Pleasant Pilllets, I did not take three at night, but I then reduced the dose to two "Pilllets" every day, and continued this to the question in some other form.

There is danger in neglecting a cold,

and such only a reliable blood purifier

can effect a perfect and permanent cure.

Uncle Sam's best blood purifier is Dr. H. C. Atkinson's Anti-

Consumption Syrup. In fact, it was, too late, but should have been spared. This medicine has no equal for curing coughs, colds and all afflictions of the throat and lungs.
