MEMORIES.

Since we were married, I have been thinking of you a great deal. I wish you were here now. I wish you were here now. I wish you were here now.

NOTES HERE AND THERE.

The Superiority.

Of Hood's Nerve Pills is due to the tremendous amount of brain work and constant care used in the preparation.

Just look at that concerted boy! Isn't it perfectly absurd such boys to go in society?

"Why?" exclaimed his companion, "that isn't a door, it's a mirror!" The young man speedily disappeared.

A fisherman, in response to his wife's request that he would try to look a little more neat and respectable, said it didn't make any difference, as nobody except his own comrades ever saw him; but she gave him a new idea on the subject when she exclaimed:

"But only think, Joe, what an awful memory it would be to see if you should get drowned looking so!"

A newspaper canvassing agent, being told by an old lady that she was not a subscriber for papers, said Mother Rippen said the world was coming to an end this year, said:

"But won't you want to read an account of the whole affair, as soon as it comes off?"

"That will," answered the old lady and she subscribed.

"Doctor," said a gentleman to an aged playman, "why does a little fault in a good man attract more notice than a great fault in a bad man?"

"For the same reason, perhaps," answered the reverend doctor, "that a slight stain on a white garment is more readily noticed than a larger stain on a colored one."

A tramp walked into a down town business office the other morning and very politely asked for a dime.

"You have about as much nerve as any tramp I ever witnessed," responded the head of the firm.

"Come off," said the visitor, "I'm no tramp, I'm an actor."

"You are? Well, in what line are you?"

"In summer, when there's plenty to eat and I can sleep out of doors, it's comedy; but in winter, when I'm freezing and my stomach it's tragedy," and on that he got a dime.

THE MILLENNIUM.

Dilly communicated the story confidentially to F. Eddie Barr.

"See here," said Dilly, pushing the toe of a pair of stout new shoes through the fence.

"Where did you get them?" asked Freddie.

"And see here!" continued Dilly, bobbing up for an instant to show the pretty head that covered her yellow hair, and touching it significantly with her hand.

"Where did you get 'em?" repeated Freddie.

"My pa worked and bought 'em and brought 'em home, an' they didn't get into nobody's barrel, either," explained Dilly with great pride and little regard for grammar, pressing her face close against the fence for a prolonged interview.

"You see, Freddie Barr," began Dilly, "the Millennium has come to our house."

"The what?" said Freddie in bewilderment.

"The Millennium, it's a pretty long word," explained Dilly, complacently, "but it means good times. Anyhow, that's what we called it, and I guess you know it was just the way, Freddie Barr. When you told me Mr. Barney had all our good things down to his store in his own barrels I just went right down there and asked for 'em, and I got 'em."

"You didn't?" exclaimed horrified Freddie.

"Did, too!" declared Dilly, with an emphatic nod. "Well, he wouldn't give us one of them, and he was just as cross as anything. So then my pa got up from behind the stove and walked home with us. He didn't scold a bit, but he set down for the free this way and thought that at least in his pocket he had in one pocket, but there wasn't nothing there, then he put it in the other pocket and found ten cents, and he went out and bought some more for supper. When my pa got home he talked to her, and they both agreed. I don't know what for, but he said 'cause we didn't get the things out of the barrels. And my pa begged me most to death that night, and kissed me late of times. Well, my pa got some work the next day, and brought some money, and now he has found a place where he works every day. He bought all these things, and he says his little boy and girl shall have things like the other boys and girls. So now you'll know what the Millennium means, Freddie Barr, when you tell that Dilly knows explained it to you."

"There comes to us from the Indies, and take their name from the Latin obvia, meaning a nail, to which they have resemblance."

Dear Sirs:

I have been using Burdock Blood Purifier for both and skin diseases, and I find it very good. As a Dyspeptic you I have also found an equal.

Mrs. Sarah Hamilton, Montreal, Quebec.

This excellent preparation you speak of was a great help to me. I wish you could give me some more of it.

They come to me. Perhaps you live too well. We all live better now than our forefathers. The food is too highly spiced. We take too much of it. Nature does us for reasons. Oh, that bilious feeling which nags at the stomach! I have been cured by your pills. I wish you could give me some more of it.
