THE RAIN VS. THE FAIR
An Othello who Highly Successful
Exhibition Greatly Marred by Wet Weather.

DEST HALL EXHIBIT EVER MADE.

So very much depends upon the state of the weather in determining the success or otherwise of the fall exhibition that it is always a problem as to their results. The way the exhibits poured into the secretary's office on Tuesday and for a week previous has promised that the annual fair of Action Horticultural and Agricultural Society would be the best in its history. The grand display in the hall fully warranted the confidence but the heavy rain which followed put a stop to all the fun. Weather mostly interfered both with the number of entries of stock and attendance of visitors. The weather brought more towards noon and the amount of stock brought in afterwards was remarkable under the circumstances. The entries of horses and cattle were somewhat below those of former years, but a very large exhibit of sheep, pigs and poultry was turned out in large numbers during the afternoon and the officers and directors hope the financial result will fairly satisfy.

The display in the hall was in every respect superior. Instead of some dozen animals being kindly crowded with entries and others making but a meager showing nearly every class was well filled. As a result the inside exhibit was unusually excellent and attractive. The ladies made a splendid display in their departments; those in fancy work and fine arts were especially creditable while in the more practical character and Vernon was particularly varied. The entries for home cooking pastries were remarkable both for variety and special prizes. They completely filled a table entirely across the hall. It was a most attractive display and highly complimentary to the housewives of this community. The exhibit of the products of the dairy was very inviting and was unusually full. A fine display of butter and cheese followed soon afterwards. The remaining departments were well filled and added much beauty to the hall. There was an immense exhibit of fruit, especially apples. Judges acknowledged that it was superior to anything they had seen before this year. In the grain entries were oats, factory and numerous, while in rye a large and excellent showing was made. During the period of drought a few weeks ago it was thought the root crop would be a failure, but the subsequent rains caused remarkable growth and in all classes the results were excellent. The dozen prize turkeys weighed 10 pounds each and one of the big mangolds brought down the scales at 21 pounds. The competition was keen in most sections. The large list of special prizes, which included many novel and interesting features, added considerably to the success of the show.

The hall when illuminated on Tuesday evening was most attractive and the large company of visitors enjoyed the evening thoroughly. Action Cornet Band enlivened the proceedings and an interval Kelly & Phillips added to the merriment.
