Poetry.

OH, FOR THE DAYS GONE BY.

Oh, would I were a boy again to roam about the hills, and to be a member of the college, and to be a member of the college, and to be a member of the college.

To play upon the strings of my violin, and to be a member of the college, and to be a member of the college, and to be a member of the college.

To play upon the strings of my violin, and to be a member of the college, and to be a member of the college, and to be a member of the college.
