

The Young Folks.

WHEN THE NOTE FALLS DEAF.

You may say that life is trouble when the clouds are in the blue, but a fellow finds it doubtful when the note falls deaf.

There's nothing but a bubble that will vanish from the view, but its trouble, trouble, trouble, when the note falls deaf.

And the come-it goes to stable, and the rose-it withers, see, and its trouble, trouble, trouble, when the note falls deaf.

Not a single fly or double, there'll be work enough for you in a living world of trouble, when the note falls deaf.

ANECOTE OF WENDELL PHILIPS.

In 1865 I happened to meet Wendell Phillips in the street of Boston. He was walking faster than usual. "Where are you going, Mr. Phillips?" I asked.

"I'm hurrying to Faneuil Hall. There's a meeting there. President Grant has called out troops in New Orleans to suppress the riots. I must be at the meeting and away he went."

I followed the eloquent man, then in his prime. At Faneuil Hall there was a great Democratic crowd. The Democrats were indignant at the government and it was dangerous for a Republican to speak. I entered in front, and just as I cast my eye on the platform I saw Mr. Phillips begin to ascend the speaker's platform.

A Democratic orator was speaking, but no sooner had Mr. Phillips' head peeped over than "Phillips, Phillips!" Very soon he was addressing the audience, and endeavor to conciliate and pacify his hearers.

"In all cases where great peril to citizens government to protect them." No sooner had he finished the sentence than a number of men began to rise.

"The great orator paused a moment and then an inspired orator took hold of him by his great eye glasses, and in a blast of frothy foam exclaimed:

"Trash thrown into the cauldron of hell would blaze like that!"

SHOES OF DIFFERENT NATIONS. Shoes sandals are still in use in China and Japan. Egyptian shoes were made of palm and papyrus interlaced.

The ancient Persians wore close-fitting boots reaching to the knee and the name of the "brogan" to-day gets its name from the rawhide 'hog' of the ancient Britons.

Egyptian hieroglyphics show the cobbler to have been known in the time of the Pharaohs.

Removing the shoes is still a mark of respect in the East, as it has been for thousands of years.

The Roman women wore house slippers with soft soles, and increased their height by building up three soles to great thick soles.

The Greeks of two thousand years ago wore shoes corresponding closely to those of the present. Those of the women were frequently green in color, while the 'dudes' wore white.

The turned up toes fashionable in England during the three hundred years of the Plantagenet dynasty were sometimes like feet in length, and were fastened to the knees by gold or silver chains.
