Within another year all Europe will be outsigled in a conflict, the final outcome of which is beyond the ken of man -such te the opinion of Archibald Forbes, the veteran war correspondent, whose wide experience lends weight to his prophetic words. Should the Armentan massacres which are now shocking the civilized world be followed by war, those herrible blot on the ameteenth contary orvibration would be swiftly avenged, but at a terrible quat of blood and treasure. Never were the implements of war so death-dealing a they are to day, and the punishment of the "unspeakable Turk" could probably only be accomplished by widespread disaster and bloodshed Other nations than that of the Sultan's would experience the horrors of war, with the result of a radical reconstruction of the map of Europe.
