For man lerael and it was with gladness it wa King of this new nation over which David. Modern nations might learn important lessons from this event. Again, while the hosts of Israel united in their hozannas t the Lord at this time, there were subse gates and receive him willingly and gladly But if the Jows were at variance their professions of loyalty at the reception of the ark, what about the reception into his own and his own received him not." There was, it is true, a fitful gleam cast over the reception by the loyalty of low of his followers, but the Jows, instead of welcoming him, scorned him and cast him out with the lepers and the dogs. We learn an important lesson here when we realize that they mused their golder opportunity. What they lost they wil never regain until they receive Jesus. was amongst them and they missed him because they expected him to come as their King with a great following of soldiers and servants. You and I will regret it if we miss this great opportunity of receiving Josus. As you are gathered here on this anniversary occasion to rejoice in beautiful new place of worship where you come again and again to unite in praise to your heart and dwell there if you sock such entrance. In concluding this vory able and interesting discourse the preacher contrasted vividly the willingness and reverence of the Israelites in receiving ark at Mount Zion and the rejection of Jesus Christ by the Jows in the same city. By accepting or rejecting him to-day, we are either like David when the ark was returned or like the Jews when Jesus owns to earth. His tion form rather a striking contrast to his utterances of Tuesday evening. Mr. Francit was certainly expected to be true to the noble position he took last year, and we believe the Farm Parsa will be austained in its conclusion that it was the stand he took hen which secured for him an increased majority at the last election. Of course when Councillor Francis took this course the motion to reduce was deleated. Conn oillors Nicklin and Brown took strong grounds in favor of reducing the number to reach that point.
