A Knot of White Ribbon.

By MARGARET MERRIFIELD.

The rain fell in a heavy mist and the wind whistled mournfully through the trees.

The street lamps glowed and the foot-paths were wet and shining.

The pedestrians drew their wraps closer and hurried along.

For an hour or more the figure of a woman might have been seen wandering up and down the street.

THE OLD FISHMAN'S STORY.

The good man years ago, but I'll never forget that night.

Twenty years ago, on a long, low, low swell.

I never thought I'd be living, yet I often think of it.

When a man has seen like this, he is likely to forget.

The night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.

And the night, the night, and the night, the night, the night.
