SHE WAS A BUSINESS WOMAN.

"There are more ways than one to make s living," said a demure little woman, with flashing brown eyes, to a reporter. "I know a woman who was left penniless in Manchester. She was riding in a tram one day, when she was struck with the sameness of the advertisements that are posted up in the cars. She believed that she could write good advertisements, and she thought out a lot of little four-line rhymes for a certain article. She submitted them to the advertising manager of the firm who manufactured it, and they were accepted, and now she is making a lot of money overy year with her verses, extelling various wares."

"Pshaw I" said the blonde, who sat next to the demure little woman. "I know of a case that discounts that."

"Well, I'do, and I'll tell you about it, to prove it. A friend of mine, who had been doing some newspaper work, got the craze for writing advertisements, and she went around a lot of establishments, only to find that they were well supplied with people to look after that branch of their business. She did not find one firm that was willing to let her try her hand, and she began to work. In less than a year she was comfortably off for the rest of her life." "Did she invent some new style of writing or something of that kind ?" asked the demute little woman.

"No," replied the blonde, "but she married the senior partner." SIMPLE SUBTRACTION.

A favorable example of Irish wit is the following borrowed from Judge. It answers very well, also, as a hit at the goodputured people who amuse themselves by patronizing the "lower classes."

An Irishman was hadling, water in barrels from a small river to supply the in habitants of the village, which was not pro vided with water-works. As he halted at the top of the bank to give a "blow" be fore proceeding to peddle the water, gentleman of the inquisitive type rode up and after passing the time of day, asked : "How long have you been hauling water for the village, my good man?"

There never was, and never will be, universal panaces, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently scated diseases rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in torn would aggravate the other. We have, however, n Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound anadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious use, the frailest systems are led, into convalescence and strength, by the influence which Quinino exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic, state of morbid despondence and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening thohealthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substanco-result, improved appetite.
