

After

a course of Ayer's Pills the system is set in good working order and a man begins to feel that life is worth living. He who has become the gradual prey of constipation, does not realize the friction under which he labors, until the burden is lifted from him. Then his mountains sink into molehills, his moroseness gives place to jollity, he is a happy man again. If life does not seem worth living to you, you may take a very different view of it after taking

ON A PERUVIAN CLIFF. Expers bave found a great many mummics in caves in cliffs among the Peruvian Mountains. How the Indians who entombed their dead in this way reached the caves hundreds of feet down the side of steep cliffs, is a matter of conjecture. A French traveller, M. Weiner, narrates a visit to one of these sepulchres, and the serious dauger he was in of ending his travels then and there. "I went with two ludians," he writes, "to a point on high plateau below which was one of the caves, and had the Indians lower me over the precipics with leather ropes. . . "A journey of a hundred metres straight downward, made in such a way, is, extraordinarily long. I arrived at last at the tomb. It was half-closed with rocks. went in and found two soulls and a mummy I tied the skulls to my-belt, and taking the mummy in my arms, gave the signal for the Indians to draw me up." "They obeyed, and gradually I neared the top of the precipics. The Indians had not looked over it, and had no suspicion of what I was bringing in my arms. "When the yellow skull of their ancient ancestor appeared above the edge of the cliff, the Indians were terribly frightened, and "I cannot describe my feelings in the next second, the awful terror of beginning to full. In my fright I let go of the mummy, and it was dashed into a thousand pieces at the bottom of the abyes. But the Indians had not lost their hold of the ropes; they drow me up again, and in a moment I stood in safety at the top of the

DO NOT WET A LEAD PENCIL.

The practice of wetting a lead pencil on the tongue before using is an unclean habit, to say the least, and perhaps also a 13 dangerous one.

Recently a woman of fine bearing and elegantly dressed stopped into the counting room of one of the local papers of a large city to insert an advertisement. Having no lead pencil of her own, she picked up pencil which was tied with a string to a pad used for writing. At once she moistened the lead with her tougue and began to write. An elderly woman who was standing by reminded her that the pencil had just been used by an old man, ragged and dirty, greasy and fifthy, who also had contracted the same habit of wetting the pencil on his tongue every time he wrote a word. The disgusted woman flong the pencil away and scolded the young man behind the counter until he sharpened a brand new pencil for her use and benefit. The limbit is a foolish one. Instead of making the pencil write more freely and casily, it hardens it and makes it write blurred and irregular. Newspaper men and those who use lead encils a great deal never dampen the lead in the mouth or with a sponge. Besides being injurious to the lead, it is a dangerous liabit, inasmuch as disease has been known to be conveyed in that way into the

It is no vain or idle bonst when the declaration is made that Paine's Celery Compound cures when all other means fail. Warning. To day a grand army of men and, women in our own Canada can voten for the truth of the statement made.

As a proof that Paine's Belory Compound oures in the darkest-times of disease and misery we give the testimony of Mr. Finter, of Ottawa, Ont., who was saved at almost the eleventh hour. Ho says : "I consider it a duty to acknowledge the great good that I derived from your valuable remedy, Paine's Celery Compound. For four years I endured terrible agony and misery owing to paine in my head and chest. Life was a burden to me, and no living mortal could describe my sufferings. I was treated by doctors, and used many

Burdock Pills, small, safe and sure

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound unadolterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious use, the frailest systems are led into con valescence and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondence and lack of interest the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshng sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veine, strengthening the bealthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result. strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance-result, improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and guaged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any on the market. All druggists sell it. The Greek flag is a white cross on a blue ground-the Bavarian colors and the Greek
