EDISON'S VIEW OF HORSELESS CARRIAGES:

A reporter of a duily paper interviewed Edison recently upon the subject of horseless carriages. His opinion is that the problem rests on the construction of cheaper and lighter motors. Over 2,000 men, he says, are at work in this country alone trying to invent better motors for horseless vehicles. Hundreds of others in Europe are also engaged in the same task. The automobile is bound to be in general use before long. . Take the bloycle for instance.

The high grade wheels which cost $100 to-day will in a few years at best drop to adults. $50, and machines that can now be bought for from $40 to $60 will coat only $20 to $80. The same thing will be the outcome of the experiment with horseless carriages. The motors now cost from $250 to $850 each. The motors will also be made smaller and can be more easily manipulated. Then trioycles and light road vehicles can be put on the market at a cost of $100 to $150 caob; a serviceable light vehicle to carry two, or even four, people can be made after the principle of the tricycle at a cost of from $150 to $200 In the construction of the motor there are three kinds of power to consider-gas, petroleum and electricity. Electricity should be the best and cheapest. The most successful automobiles made thus far are those in which electric motors. are used. They can go twenty five miles or more without being re-charged at the rate of ten miles an hour. Delivery waggons, broughams and all the heavier class of vehicles can be driven as easily by storage battery as any other kind if the battery is improved sufficiently, and that

One of those men who lack only experience and knowledge to make them great editors said to an editor recently: "We expect the local paper to say all of these good things about us. It goes in to help fill up the news columns, and the news is what we buy the paper for." "Very true," says the editor editorially, "but did you over consider that the unpleasant things the local paper might truthfully say about you, but does not, would sell ten papers to the complimentary item's one? We regret that human nature is built that way, but it is nevertheless, and the fellow making local country newspaper in the little balliwik where everybody knows everybodyelse's business better than his own, finds it much more difficult to determine what to leave out of the sheet than what to put in it. A contemporary recently represented Robt. Ingersoll as walking up to a large ancient structure, shaking his fist at it, pulling off his coat, and going to work to Some persons have periodical attacks of tear it down.

WHAT CAUSES A COLD.

Nothing is more common than to hear the cold accused of having provoked the disease known by the same name, an inflammation of the lunge, an attack or even an epidemie of diphtheria or grippe. How has it been able to do this? Surely it has not caused to spring up, ready armed, the microbes of those different maladies. It | Toronto, Ont. has only been able to favor their interven tion or their action, The cold does no give free to the microbe, but it benumbs and paralyzes the lencocyte charged with contending against it. Various other causes may binder the ac-

It is sufficient to bruise the member near the point where an inoculation has been made, to break a bone in the vicinity, in short to give other work to the leucocytes, who are at the same time the police force and the street-sweepers of the organism, charged with making disappear all the dead or deteriorated elements. But they cannot do everything at once, and while they are working to repair the material disorders caused by the contualon or the fracture, the microbes, that they easily englobe in a healthy momber, get the upper hand, because they have free

There never was, and never will be, universal panacea, in one remedy, for al ills to which flesh is heir-tho very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however in Quinine Wive, when obtained in a sound unadultorated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious use, the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondence and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the BEST healthy animal functions of the system, STEEL thoreby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance-result, improved appetite.
