A MAIDEN'S HAPPY DAY.

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD. "Oh I I have had a happy day !" -Exclaimed an artiess maiden, Whose cheeks were like the bloom of Ma;

Whose eyes with mirth were laden.

"But then it stormed," I said to her;

"And gloomy was the weather." Said sho: "Twas all the cosler For us to be together!"

"What did you do to make it gay? I asked. "Were many present?" Said sho: "I really cannot say;

But still 'twas very pleasant.' 'Tis always so. In every place Sho finds some satisfaction;

SENSIBLE WEDDING PRESEN taining her friends. On the wedding day | ments seem like the twisting of snakes. she remarked that a great many of her friends seemed to have forgotten her, but in the excitement of the event she thought little about it. When she returned from her trip, she found a little house furnished from cellar to attic. She declared that there wasn't a thing lacking from piano to sink brush, from refrigerator to window

The place was top full of surprises. A little door here disclosed a linen closet, an other a put away place for workbaskets and sewing materials. A cupboard was packed with towels, wash clothe, house clothe, dishcloths and dusters, and a furnitore beater hung on a nail in a convenient locality. There were doormats and kitchen poker, shovel and tonge, and even every thing doubly sure three young cousins of the bride and a competent servant kept house there for a week, and when anything was required it went down on the list and came up to the little house in due course of time until the pleasant task was completed. And there is one bride in the world who believes in sensible wedding presents.

SHE LOST HER HEAD.

This girl thinks that trainmen are just horrid. One of them nearly soured her into a fit the other day, Sho was going down to the levee ferry landing to visit a trip and she had heard awful stories of how down on the levee, whose denizens she had been told thought less of outting a throat than of wringing a chicken's head off.

She was nervous and seared as she ponetrated the city's purileus. A freight train was being switched down there and loud-voiced switchman was giving instructions to another of his craft. Switchmen have a language all their own, which is incomprehensible to the plain, everyday, non-railroading oilizen. Among other things they call a train "fer" and "sho" just as a sailor refers to a ship, and just as she neared the switchman this is what he

While thus engaged he was touched on the shoulder by a quiet-looking man who slowly remarked, to the great astonishment of Bir Andrew, "Sir, I am going to throw you off." As the quiet looking man was the larger and there was no help at hand the matter for the moment assumed a very serious aspect. Fortunately for Sir. Andrew, he is possessed of rare presence of mind and in a bantering way exclaimed : "Pooh ! that's nothing; anybody could throw a man off here. Now if you want to io something great, try and throw me up here from the ground."

"Well I can do that," said the maniao, for such he proved to be, and if you will kindly descend to the street I will prove
