A FEW ANNOYANCES.

Vivid Description of One Days Work in the Household of Simon's Wife.

We have not had much company lately and I have been too busy to go anywhere. I began to want to see somebody so I cosxed Simon to go to church this morning. He tried to beg off because he pound. had been working hard in the cornfield and wanted a rest and a good long nap I was corry afterward that I did not let him, for he got so sleepy I had to keep an eye on him all the time, besides now and then kicking his foot, or sitting up close enough to give him a hunch with my elbow under my cape. Then I remembered that the wash boller had sprung a leak last Monday and I had neglected sending it to the shop to be mended, so when I knew Simon was wide awake, enough awake to avoid the disgrace of suoring my, mind was busy with plans to get my washing done without a boiler, and I really understood very little of the sermon. But after it was over we stayed around as long as we could to visit, and came home feeling gestion, bed taste, could quite freshened up.

I believe I think as much of my family as most women, but I often wish they could be all out of the way till I got my work done up. One day last week I was in an awful hurry to get my baking done I ran to the cellar for a cup of cream and was trying my beet to reach the mixing pan before it dripped too much for me to towelland was vigorously wiping his hands | tolerated. and face while he inspected the fruit. I made my cookies that day from equal parts | Hall's Hair Renewer. of sour cream and sugar, with a proper amount of sods, a little salt and nutmeg. They were so good that Simon and the children ate half the batch before I finished baking and the rest was gone in no time. They made such ado about them that I had not the elamina to refuse so long as one was left. I was not too busy though to notice how much more ready they were to mention my ill temper when I drove all of them out of the pantry, than they were to make a fuse over my goodness in allowing them to eat all my cookies. The children let fles into the house too, and that frete Lon. She insists in having turkey's tail and the poor fowl was trying spinal troubles. to run away from it for two or three days. That made fun for the children and even Simon had a hearty laugh over it. Last week the stuff made another little episode for us. -Lou- had spread some upon the dining room table. When supper came she was flustered because company came and I was in the huckleberry swamp. In her harry to get the paper out of the way she could think of no other place, so she slipped it into the plant window on the floor. The plants were all out, and the cortain drawn so no one saw it. That night Simon thought he saw something or somebody around the house, got up to look out, and just stepped out into the plant window and-tanglefoot-with his bare feet. Heraised such a racket that it woke nearly everyone in the house. The minister who converted him once, was staying with us. If he understood what was said. he must have thought it high time the job was done over sgain. People used to have to take all the flies that came, except what they managed to trap in a tumbler of soap auds covered with a slice of sweetened bread, or smarked between a couple of shingles spread on the ipside with molasses and suspended from the ceiling with a string. They lived to a good old age then too, so I guess a dozen or two flies will not kill any of de now. At least I shall never wear myself out chasing after them .-Simon's Wife.

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many curatives being such that were he germs of other and differently seated liseance rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious use, the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength, by the infigence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. 'It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondence and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refrosh ing sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance-result, improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman, of Toronto, have given to the public their Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and, guaged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists so it.
