"THE LEAST OF THESE." She had little of earthly beauty, She had less of earthly lore;

She climbed by a path so narrow. Such wearisome burdens bore! And she came with a beart a-tromble, To the warder at heaven's door. And said, "There were hearts of heroes;"

She said, "There were hands of might; I had only my little children, That called to me day and night; Lould only soothe their sorrows, Their childish hearts make light."

And she bowed ber head in silence She hid her face in shame; When, out from a blaze of glory, A form majestic came: And sweeter than all heaven's music Lo, some one called her name!

"Dear heart, that hath self forgotton, That never its own has sought, Who keepsth the weak from falling. To the King bath jowels brought. Lo, what thou hast done for the children,

"It is surprising the number of rubber bands that are used in the mercantile business these days," said a downtown druggist a few nights ago, as he quickly snapped one around a 5-cent package of sodium bicarbon ate for a woman customer. "We use hundreds every day, whereas formerly we used twine. The manufacture of rubber bands has become an enormous industry in this country, particularly during the past few years. It is not half a dozen years ago hardly that rubber bands were used almost solely for filling papers and documents, and you seldom saw them used outside of a city hall or court house. CONTAGIOUS.

It was on a crowded suburban car out of Washington one day last summer that a middle aged woman, carrying a fretful baby was forced to squeeze herself into a small space left vacant beside a dapper youth of possibly twenty years, whom the baby in its restlessness, would touch with hand or foot. Finally he turned towards the woman and inquired in a tone quite audible to those near him, "Ah, beg pawdon, madame, but has this child anything-sh-contagious?" Glancing compassionately as him, through her gold rimmed spectacles, she remarked, meditatively, "Well, now, I don't know, young man : but-ah-it might be to you. She's teething!"-Harper's Drawer. IT WASN'T FUNNY.

"I don't call that funny ; I call it tragic," he said. (Somebody had told the woman who declared that lovemaking was not what it used to be, that you never hear of men tearing their hair and going down on their knees nowadays, and that, know my husband didn's go down on his knees when he proposed to me," whereat her dearest friend said; "Didn's he? He did when he proposed to me.") "Tragic for whom?" asked somebody. "For that

A man who recently went to Nisgara Falls on a bridal trip says that he was considerably taken aback by the old guide whom he had hired. The guide had several times appeared displeased at the Louisville man's rather open lavishment of affection upon his new found maie, but he said nothing till he found a chance to make his stroke a telling one.

"What a roar the falls make!" said the bridegroom, "It is wonderful!" The old suide looked disgusted. "That's suithin wonderful," He said. "If you had to stay here like them poor old falls and listen to all the stuff there here bridal WATER DRINKING.

When it is considered that the body is made up largely of water it can readily be understood how important to health is a constant supply of this fluid. Many people have a notion that the drimking of water in any amount beyond that actually necessarry to quench thirst is injurious and acting on this belief they endeavor to drink, as little as possible. The notion, however, is wide of the truth. Drinking freely of pure water is a most efficacious means not only of restoring it when fulling.
