A DREAMING MATCH. Among the famous Indian traders of the past, says an exchange, was George Galphin, whose trading station at Silver Bloff, South Carolins, was frequented by Indiana from far and near. In Bench and Bar of Bouth Carolina, a characteristic anecdote is related of Mr. Galpin and an Indian Chief Mogoloch from beyond the Savannah river spent the night at Mr. Galphin's.

In the morning the Indian said : "Me dream last night." "Ah !" said Galpin, what did my red brother dream? "Me dream you give me fine big rifle"n Galpin's possession at the time. The trader instantly passed the rifle the chief, saying "If you dreamed it, you must have it." Next morning Galpin said to the chief, "I dreamed last night."

"What did you dream?" asked Mogo-

HIS OWN WORK.

The vanity of a certain well-known painter is ridiouled in a story told of him. It relates that the painter was travelling by not staying long enough. in a train through the mountains and as the weather was warm and the painter had not had enough sleep the night before he dozed in his seat.

He bad a travelling companion who insisted upon talking to him nevertheless, and as the train passed a fine prospect exclaimed: "Look, look! What a beautiful land

"Yep," grunted the painter, dreaming family medicine, and I would not and hearing a shop phrase, "I painted !
