AN INTERRUPTED FLIRTATION.

neareighted, bashful youth, whose father is a well-known commission merchant in Cincinnati, while walking along Fourth street dimly discerned a young lady across the street whose face he could not distinguish, but whose figure was to striking that for a moment his bashfulness vanished. He determined to indulge in a mild flirtation, With mincing step he followed, and when nearly up to her, fortunately for his plane, she dropped her parasol, In a jiffy he picked it up and, raising his hat, was about to present it with a stammering speech, when the young lady exclaimed:

HIS MOTHER.

The best side of men comes out when they talk of their mother or their children Of their children they are usually quite ready to talk, but their reverence for their mother is not told to averybody. When a man talks to you about his mother, you are to feel honored; it is a mark of his respect and regard for you. The strong man's eyes moisten as he talks of his mother, as he tells how she taught him to be pure, selfreliant, brave, as he pictures her fidelity nd tenderness. You find him in his office, but be gives you a few minutes of his time. Almost unconsciously you make an allusion to your boyhood or ask about his, and then, If you are the right kind of a man and he knows you well enough, he talks about his mother. Let him do the talking, and you have made a good pastoral call. You cannot say anything that will bring him so near to God as his own talk about his Depreciating your neighbor's wares doe not enhance the value of your own. There never was, and never will be, universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently stated diseases rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound anadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious use, the frailestsystoms are led into conlescence and strongth, by the influen which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondence and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strongthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strongthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance-result, improved appetite.
