STREAMS BY QUIET WAYS. On streams that glide by quiet ways, Far from the city's noise,

Here oft the angler spends his days, And truant playing boys. Here, too, the heron comes and feeds, King fishers haunt each pool; Loud call the frogs among the reeds,

In summer evenings cool. And rippling softly on your way Beyond life's whirl and din, You sing and travel day by day,

The fields and woods within. A harbor for the wild duck here, Is found by mossy brink, Where oft of old the timid deer And Indians came to drink.

The reapers from the harvest fields Oft rest here through the noon, To est their quiet mid-day meal And quaff thy priceless boon, Home of the tront in shady nooks Where morey stones abound,

Supplied by rains and mountain brooks While seasons go their round. Your needful belp the miller owns, That moves the wheel at will, With foamy force and roaring tones,

O streams, flow on with sounds of mirth, A joy to beast and man, Sing in the future still your worth As since the world began.

When blevele manufucturers and riders the world over were having trouble with their bleycle chains, which, in spite of all they could do, would wear and stretch, it was a Canadian who found a way out of the difficulty.

The Wilson Chain with which Red Birds are fitted

This Canadian was Mr. Wm, Wilson, one of the experts paid by this company to bring the Red Bird nearer a state of absolute perfection.

This invention consisted of a patent, whereby the centre part of the pin was hardened, giving the hardened steel pin. So well was this received that the largest chain manufacturing establishment in the world purchased the American right to produce it.
