A BIT ABSENTMINDED

There have been a great many stories about absentminded men, where one forgets his house address, another what business he is in and where another has refer to the mark on his handkerchief before he can remember his own name. There is a farmer named Rogers in the north who possessed a Jersey oow which he used to drive, morning and evening, to and from the pasture, not far from his

A little boy was taken by his father into a cafe for dinner. As they were eating their dessert, the father handed the waiter a bill which that worthy carried to the cashier's desk, returning presently with a little pile of change on a silver plate. Why is it that nearly all aged persons are thin? And yet, when you think of it, what could you expect? Three score years of wear and tear are enough to make the digestion weak. Yet the body must be fed. In Scatt's Emulsion, the work is all done; that is, the oil in it is digested, all ready to be taken into the blood. The body rests, while the oil feeds and nourishes, and the hypophosphites makes the nerves steady and strong.

WISE PLAIN GIRLS.

A lady who had seen much of the world was asked on one occasion why plain girls often get married sooner than handsome ones; to which she replied that it was mainly owing to the tact of the plain girls and the vanity and want of tact on the part of the men. "How do you make that out?" asked a gentleman. "The plain girls flatter the men, and so please their vanity, while the handsome ones wait to be flattered by the men, who haven't the tact to do it."

It is always safe to risk a little flattery. Happy is the woolng

That is not long a-doing, says the old couplet, but a modern counselor thinks it necessary to qualify the adage by the advice, "Never marry a girl unless you have known her three days and at a pic-nic." In this as in other matters it is always desirable to hit the happy medium. Marrying in haste is certainly worse than a too protracted courtship, though the latter has its dangers, too, for something may occur at any time to break off the affair altogether and prevent what might have been a happy union. A friend of Robert Hall, the famous

English preacher, once asked him regard ing a lady of their acquaintance, "Will she make a good wife for me?" "Well," replied Mr. Hall, "I can hardly say. I never lived with her." Here Mr. Hall touched the real test of happiness in married life. 1 is one thing to see ladies on "dress" occasions, when every effort is being made to please them; it is quite another thing to see them amid the varied and ofter conflicting circumstances of household

MARRIAGE THEIR CHIEF OBJECT To Italian girls to mire marriage is to miss the chief aim in life. They make no secret of the fact. They regard it as their mission, and woe unto them if they fail of

This was amusingly impressed upon some American girls who are at present traveling abroad. An Itelian girl asked one of them naively one day if all American girls were old maids.

"Of course not." she answered. "You must not judge all America by the handful of students and travelers you see over here, the few women who have no ties or are pursuing studies in order to make a living." But they were not convinced and conle not understand thirst for travel and know ledge when one might be happily married and have a home of one's own.

A GOOD SIDE.

Almost every boy has a good side, if you will only take the trouble and pains to look for it. Whether this good side shall ever be developed to it's full and proper strength or not depends largely on the kindly recognition which it receives or fails to receive at your hands. The worst thing that a parent can do is to indulge in perpetual criticism. Once convince a boy that he is thoroughly and irreclaimably bad and worthless, and he will do his best to justify your opinion of him. But if you give him credit for quoh virtues as he possesses, even though they be weak and rudimentary in character, he will be likely to grow better. The true policy is to make a constant appeal to everything that has the semblance of nobleness and upightness in his nature. Deal with him on the supposition that he means to be good and to do right. The opposits course usually issues in his complete rain.

PLOWING AT A MARK.

Pat was new at the plow, and the first attempt was anything but successful. "Look here," said the farmer, that kind of thing won't do. The corn will be dizzy that grows in a farrow so crooked as that. Fix your eye on something across the field and head straight for it. That cow there by the gate is right opposite us. Aim at her, and you'll do pretty well." .

"All right sir." said Pat. And just then the farmer was called away to the barn. Ten minutes later he returned and was porrified to be that the plow had been wandering in a zigzag course over all the

"Hold on there !" he shouted. "Hold on! what are you up to?" "And sure, sir," said Pat, "I did what you told me. I worked straight for the cov but the crayture wouldn't kape still."

Recklessness.

A'l well bred women will strive to look nest and tidy about the house while attend ing to their domestic duties. The one garment which should be rigidly tabooed is the Mother Hubbard wrapper, that loose affair which hangs about a woman in ugly folds and gives her such a slovenly appearance. A wash dress of gingham or cambric which is neatly belted in to the fixure or a short, dark waist made as a blouse or shirt waist but always belted, is what the best drossed women wear in the morning. Aprone are a great convenience and are worn by some of the best dressed women during the morning hours of household occupations. A custom which should be encouraged is to change one's gown for dinner, or at least to wear some sort of lace fichu or neck adornment which dresses one up a lttle. If you are a mother, it is a good example to your children, if a wife, a compliment to your husband. Make some radicel change in your dress as well when you spend the evening quietly at home as when you go out to spend it with friends. The idea that some women have that "any thing is good enough for home" is a sad mistake.

There never was, and never will be, a unliversal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many opratives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious use, the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength, by the influence which Quinine exerts on Nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondence and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the bealthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance-result, im proved appetite.
