LOST, THE SUMMER. Where has the summer gone? She was just here a minute ago, With roses and daisles To whisper her praises-And every one loved her so ! Has anyone seen her about?

She must have gone off in the night! And she took the best flowers And the happlest hours, And asked no one's leave for her flight. Have you' noticed her stops in the grass?

The garden looks red where she went; By the side of the hedge, Thoro's a goldenrod edge, And the rose-vines are withered and bent. Don't you fear she is sorry she went?

It seems but a minute since May ! I'm scarcely half through What I wanted to do; If she only had waited a day!

Do you think she will ever come back? I shall watch every day at the gate For the robins and clover, Saying over and over : "I know she will come, if I wait!"

-R. M. Alder DECIDED ON HIS FUTURE.

A small boy friend of mine who lives on at Cleveland Park has decided on his future profession at the age of 4. He has the interrogation mania in a peculiarly aggravated form, and after the first million or two questions in the day his mother, in self defense, begins to answer, "I don's know." Just the other day the child had an unsually violent attack of question askings and he tired of hearing her inevitable

There never was, and never will be, s unliversal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir-the very nature of many curatives being such that were the gorms of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient -what would relieve one ill, in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtained in a sound unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual judicious , the frailest systems are led into con-

It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondence and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep, imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance-result, improved appetite.
