OPEN THE DOOR.

Open the door, let in the sun; The winter's cold and darkness are fair! Joy is abroad in the world to-day; If our door is wide, it may come this way— Open the door!

Open the door, let in the sun; Strong, pure thoughts which shall banish sin; They will grow and bloom with a grace divine, And their fruit shall be sweeter than that of the tree. Open the door!

Open the door of the heart; let in sympathy sweet for stranger and kin; It will make the halls of the heart so fair That angels may enter unawares— Open the door!

ECONOMY.

"A learned woman whose husband hires his family washing done is reported to be the most economical woman in Kansas," says Anna Neal. "When she feeds the baby she puts a sprout on over her dress, then a bib over the sprout, a clean rag around the baby's neck over the bib, and then holds the hand under the baby's chin while she feeds it, with the other. By genetics of this kind, she has enabled her husband to save $8,000 in the last seven years." — Kansas City Journal.

"Do you know?" astutely interposed one of the younger women in the company, "that seems very queer to me? How can a mountain pass?" "Did you never see Cumberland Gap," he asked. "And there were no more interruptions.—Chicago Tribune.

IF THE DOCTOR SAYS DIE.

Too Many People Are Willing to Take Him At His Word—This Man Didn't—South (American Kidney Cure) Turned the Tables.

"You may live a week—You might live a year!" This is the speculation his physician gave a well-known manufacturer in Toronto eighteen months ago. Diabetes and other kidney complications had a fast hold him; but he's living, and has forty to die, and gives the credit to South American Kidney Cure. The greatest of all kidney cures ever known was improvement after one bottle, and the more affected the cure. Sold by A. T. Brown.

FLAG THE TRACK, BOYS!

On one of the New England railroads there had been a heavy rainstorm for several days, and the watercourses were swollen to the point where "wash-outs" were frequent along the line.

Four miles from a station, and but fifty feet from a bridge that spanned a rapid river, the earth was washed away from the road-bed, leaving, however, the rails in place. It was just at dusk, and the engineer could not see the dangerous place before him, his first warning coming when the rails gave way beneath the engine and was pitched into a deep hole.

The engine and express cars were precipitated down a steep embankment, but fortunately the express cars did not follow the track. There was no loss of life, although many were seriously injured.

The engineer was severely hurt, being crushed beneath the engine, and scalped by escaping steam. "It was a great oration," said the engineer, "but I escaped unscathed." His lips were black and blue, and he was unconscious.

He was removed from the engine and carried to a hospital, where he was removed from the wreck. His first thought was for others.

"Boys," he said, "keep the doors and windows of the passenger car shut. It'll be a cold night, and all the heat is out off. Flag the track, boys."

Bo down the track went the train, himself badly bruised and scalped, and crawled over the swaying bridge, dragging the broken rails behind him.

The engineer, cut and bleeding as he was, ran back to the station already passed, to give warning that the next train should meet the same fate, and to secure a doctor. He fainted from exhaustion on the track before the station, but was discovered in "session" to prevent another serious accident.

These are the brave deeds that are of frequent occurrence, yet that seldom receive praise or recognition. And the men themselves would be the last ones to claim to heroism. —O. E. World.

KHAZI HAIR.

A little fair-haired lady of some summers was being paraded along when a passer-by remarked upon her rosy cheeks and bright blue eyes.

"Why," said the lady, "you represent the natural colors; you are red, white and blue."

"Eyes," said the three-year-old, "and I have blue hair!" —Evening Mail, Dublin.
