Spring and Summer Weakness

As spring advances a weakness and debility seems to seize on the strong and delicate constitution. The circulation is sluggish on account of the exhausted nerve force, and the blood is poor in quality and deficient in tissue building elements. As a result there is a general run-down of the system. The stomach is disordered and the appetite poor, the liver, kidneys and bowels become inactive, and there is a lack of energy and enthusiasm which renders work of any kind a burden. It is not surprising, therefore, that with their depressing action that is required, but a food to maintain the nerve centre and enrich the blood.

DR. WARD'S BLOOD AND NERVE PILLS

Contain the principles that go to the building up of the body through the medium of the blood and nerve.

Poetry.

THE "COMING MAN"

A pair of very chubby feet
Knocked in social hours,
A pair of little white boots
With rather doubtful laces,
Out as a soldier's can,
And in before an old man's eyes
The "coming man" came.

His eyes, however, will read the place,
And search their unknown ways,
Perchance the human heart and soul
Will open to these eyes,
"Perchance their eyes and smiling glance
Will be a nation's light."
"Perchance their eyes will read the place,
On some old fellow's knee."

That how were highly thought it will
In solemn, sweet state,
Where faces and bodies and strength
And will with justice face,
Where science from boyhood came
Your words and words and words,
"Perchance their eyes will read the place,
On some old fellow's knee."

Those like that, in the coming years,
Will shine, or pay, or take,
Where science from boyhood came
Your words and words and words,
"Perchance their eyes will read the place,
On some old fellow's knee."

Those like that, in the coming years,
Will shine, or pay, or take,
Where science from boyhood came
Your words and words and words,
"Perchance their eyes will read the place,
On some old fellow's knee."

Secret Family Reading.

The Satsuma Bowl.

"HERE on earth did you get that Satsuma bowl, Nellie?"
"I got it from my father's estate."
"Your father's estate?"
"Yes, my father's estate."
"Your father's estate?"
"Yes, my father's estate."

THE CHURCH AT TRINITYVILLE.

The Trinityville Church has been many years successful according to the number of women it has gathered. The financial policy was the same as that which denotes many a church; they put their money in the bank, and then give it to the church, then go and buy it back again, and the church is just as much ahead, the Amalthea of the community have been duped into contributing the shekels, and a genuine philanthropist can charge the whole matter up to benevolence.
Last year it reformed, adopting the following financial policy:
To raise no money by entertainments.
To secure from each man, woman, and child of the church a pledge for current expenses, benevolence, and the debt—No undue pressure and no appeal to the ability of each giver—Every year for more confidence and more liberal giving than in 1899, and greater consequent spiritual blessing—To tender a monthly statement of all accounts—To have a "Thank Offering" to pay $2,000 or more on the debt.

THE OLD SCHOOL HOUSE.

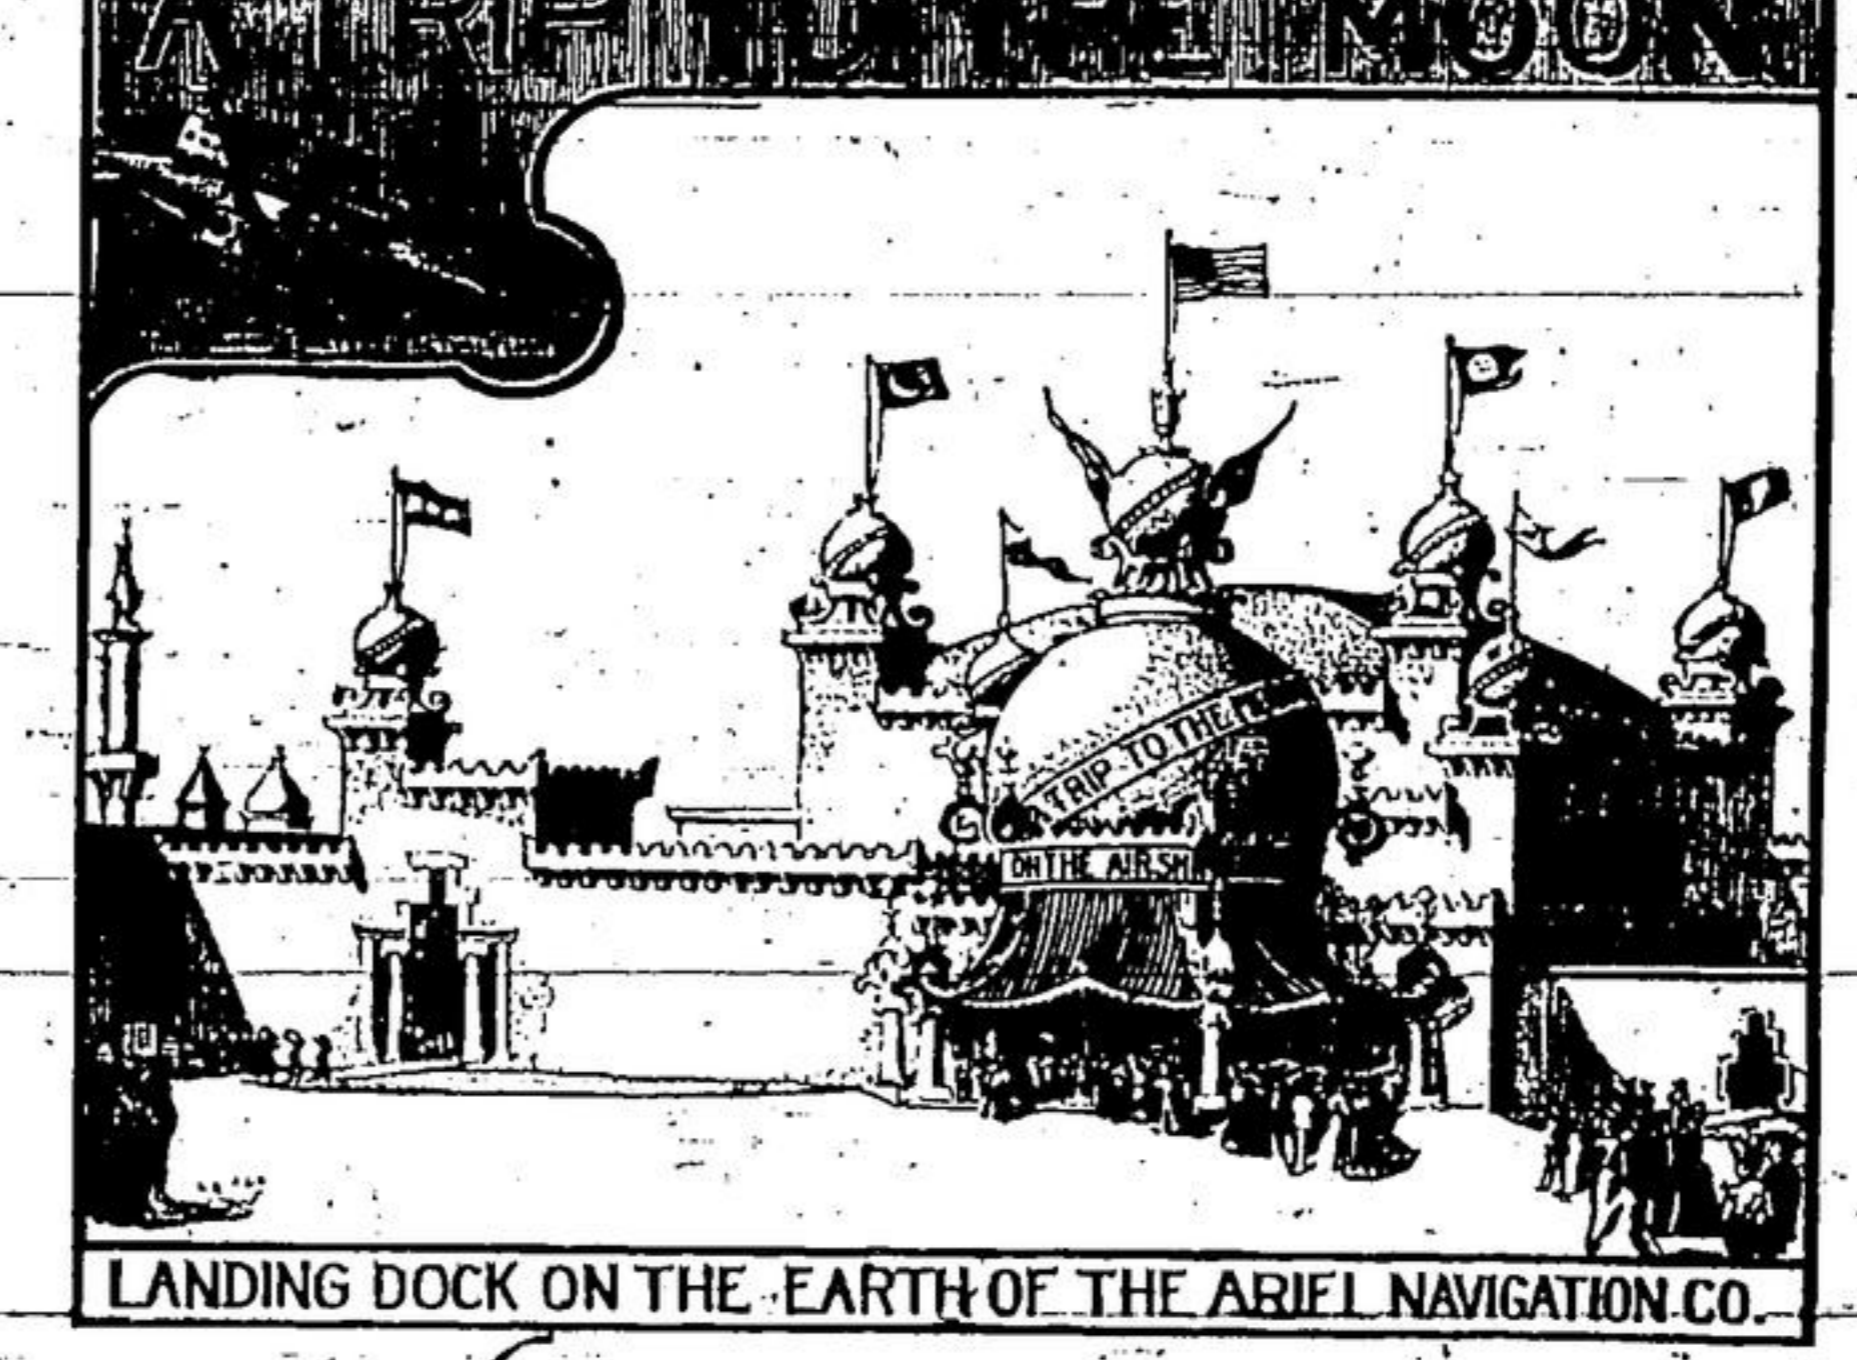

It still stands hard by the stream,
High school of years ago,
And often I to fancy seem
To gaze its portals low,
And once again I hear the chat
Of comrades' round the door,
I hold the desk at which I sit,
In many years before,
And then the teacher's voice I hear,
In some of my old lessons,
Which fill the students with fear,
As they come with love,
But now my schoolmates scattered are,
In some of my old lessons,
Which fill the students with fear,
As they come with love,
But now my schoolmates scattered are,
In some of my old lessons,
Which fill the students with fear,
As they come with love,

THE GIRL AND HER VOCATION.

"Every girl, no matter what her station or prospects, should acquire some useful art or profession, should learn to do some one thing so well that it shall have a value in the great world-market, and in her hour of need suffice to make her a breadwinner," writes Margaret E. Hanger in the August Ladies' Home Journal. "The world has an abundance of millionaires, but it can never have an abundance of those who have added to native endowment discipline and conscientious training. Probably the best gift which could be bestowed on a girl in any station in life would be what she has to know as a vocation. Many of us begin with enthusiasm but we give out before the end of the day. To adopt a line of conduct, to choose a special study, or to decide on a course of study, and stick to it, is in each case to deserve success, if not always to insure it. The path of life is strewn with the wrecks of those who began but did not hold on in their workaday world, and pain their price, must be steady and persevering in the face of every discouragement, with belief in herself and God."

WASNT' COMPULSORY.

Three different waiters at a Dublin hotel asked a quick, polite, little clergyman what was the secret of his success. If he would have soup. A little annoyed he said to the last waiter, who asked:
"Is it compulsory?"
"No, sir," answered the waiter; "I think it is compulsory."

QUEER QUESTIONS BY CHILDREN

A subscriber of the Family Herald and Weekly Star, who is principal of a school in Victoria, B. C., writes us:
"I find out what pupils are thinking about, if possible, I last month conferred a class of boys and girls of the average of thirteen, with this proposition:
"Suppose that there came into our classroom this morning a man who could not read or write, and you were to ask him a question put to him, what would you ask?"
I appended to this twenty-two of the questions selected by children from those submitted:
1. How many tons of water go over Niagara Falls in twenty-four hours?
2. Why can't kangaroos live at the north pole?
3. Who first made letters?
4. Is there any more land in this world besides Greenland?
5. Will Great Britain ever own all of the world?
6. Will it ever be able to drink the Atlantic in one day?
7. What is the moon made of?
8. How did the Queen of Sheba get her gold?
9. How could I make a fortune without working for it?
10. Why can't you people take a hint?
11. Where do our souls go after we die?
12. Why don't you cry?
13. Is Andrew living?
14. Will any one ever get to the north pole?
15. When is our world coming to an end?
16. How can I always have perfect health?
17. How can I make everybody do as I wish?
18. Will the Pacific Ocean ever be traversed more than the Atlantic?
19. How can I invent a flying machine that will work properly and not break down?
20. When the earth ceases to exist will the sun burn?
21. Do any people live in Antarctica?
22. How can I invent a flying machine that will work properly and not break down?
23. What are the questions for our next High School Entrance examinations?"

AN APT ILLUSTRATION.

A teacher was explaining to a little girl how the tree developed their foliage in the springtime.
"Ah, yes," said the little girl, "I understand; they keep their summer clothes in their trunks."

GIVING AWAY IT SECRETS.

In his plea for a reduction of the beer tax of one dollar a barrel, the editor of the Washington Sentinel, the brewer's organ, thus gives away the secrets of the trade:
"Whatever may be said of the awful sin of drinking, or the noble virtue of abstaining from it, when the tax on beer is so oppressively high, the Lord only knows what some of it may be made of. Here and there, in Washington, a few brewers may be found who keep maintaining the standard of their grade, even closely down to the point of loss, and hope for better things to respect themselves. But the majority will make things even if the tax continues by reducing their consumption of costly raw materials like barley and hops, and largely substituting cheap chemicals or an out of the best used. The practice directly and horribly affects the farmer, the hop grower, and tends to slaughter the market for their productions."
The Washington Sentinel ought to know what he is talking about.

THE GIRL AND HER VOCATION.

"Every girl, no matter what her station or prospects, should acquire some useful art or profession, should learn to do some one thing so well that it shall have a value in the great world-market, and in her hour of need suffice to make her a breadwinner," writes Margaret E. Hanger in the August Ladies' Home Journal. Many of us begin with enthusiasm but we give out before the end of the day. To adopt a line of conduct, to choose a special study, or to decide on a course of study, and stick to it, is in each case to deserve success, if not always to insure it. The path of life is strewn with the wrecks of those who began but did not hold on in their workaday world, and pain their price, must be steady and persevering in the face of every discouragement, with belief in herself and God."
