

HEADACHE

Pain back of your eyes? Heavy pressure in your head? Are you sometimes faint and dizzy? Is your tongue coated? Bad taste in your mouth? Do you often have the blues? And are you troubled about sleeping?

Then your liver is all wrong. But there is a cure. 'Tis the old reliable.

Ayer's Pills

They act directly on the liver. They cure constipation, biliousness, sick headache, nausea, and dyspepsia. Take a laxative dose each night. For 60 years they have been the Standard Family Pills.

Price 25 cents. All Druggists. I have taken Ayer's Pills regularly for six months and it has cured me of a severe headache, and I can now walk from two to three miles without getting tired or out of breath. It has made me able to do my usual work.

Write the Doctor. If you have any complaints which need a laxative medicine, you can get it from Ayer's Pills. Write to J. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass., or to S. C. Ayer, Lowell, Mass.

Chi Young Talks

ANDANTE. Your fingers sweep the keys and then your rosy cheeks and lips glow again. The long-drawn days come back again. But on no one else and so wait on my hand and so low down the far side of long ago. Whose looks resemble yours and fate for one whose heart has stayed at evening to the upland glade. Who else can bear the wild gaze cry across the solitary sky. And the wind, sweeping wilds go by. With broken words that laugh and weep. Like someone troubled in his sleep. By visions of the solitary sky. Whose forest glistens, whose woods lie hidden in far solitude. Whose no reverent foot intrude. Black toiling rapids, through whose roar a vague, great voice forewarns those who would tread where they roam. All phases of that wilderness. Whose close communion had to be my boyhood in its loneliness. All these scenes my spirit has swept by on waves of sound and then a sharp, sweet chord—they fade again. The wandering glows that greet his touch, And bare white this stained gown. Your gold hair glitters through the gloom.

—William Carmean Roberts

Nervousness and Nerve.

The more nervous a man is the less nerve he has. That sounds paradoxical—but it isn't; for nerve is stamina. It is the force that sustains the nerve, it tones the whole system, prevents digestion and assimilation, and is therefore the best medicine a nervous person can take. If you get tired easily, mentally or physically, take it—it will do you good.

There is never any fluctuation in the price of wild cats.

JUST FOR FUN.

"What do you think is the chief need of the Church here?" we asked one of the sisters. "Men," was the prompt answer. "We need men," "Why," she said, "I see no men in the Church?" "Not a man," she said; "we have some male members."—Arkansas Methodist.

The Philadelphia Inquirer recently received the following unique letter from a name of the most celebrated of the world-famed artists living, name of the most celebrated animal painter living, name of the most celebrated painter living, name of the most celebrated stage scenery painter living; who is the most celebrated portrait painter living, name of the most celebrated painter of flowers living, name of the most celebrated painter of wedding scenes living, name of the most celebrated painter of Bible scenes living, name of the most celebrated painter of battle scenes living, name of the most celebrated portrait painter living, name of the most celebrated painter of figures living, name of the most celebrated landscape artist living; is there any special gift painter; if so, who is the most celebrated one living?"

COMPANIONSHIP OF FATHER AND DAUGHTER.

"I'm sure that your father knows you love him, just as you take his affection great and do you ever stop to the think how little you have to say to him, day after day?" writes Helen Waterson Moody in the January Ladies Journal.

"How often do you find yourself at his side on the piazza, or by the dining room, really talking to him with the vivacity and interest you show Gertrude's father, for example? Sometimes he seems to want to talk, and asks questions to draw you out, but you never say a word to him, with so little desire to keep up the conversation that he feels rebuffed and says no more. Do you know that he said to me on my last visit, when he spoke of you: 'Any is a good girl and a bright one; I wish I knew her better, but she doesn't seem to find her father very interesting.' And dear, there was feeling in his voice. Now I know you have not had the slightest idea of this."

HER FIRST TELEGRAM.

A woman came into the receiving department of telegraphs this morning and set down to write a message. She took her time to it, and she covered several pages before she was through. Then she carefully folded the dispatch and placed it in an envelope. "I was washing her," said the receiving clerk, "and supposed that she was writing a note to send out by messenger, but I was mistaken. She came up to the counter and handed the envelope to me with the request that it be sent. I asked her where she wanted it to be sent, and she humbly told me to send it to the address on the envelope. 'But, madam,' I said, 'this is to go out of town.' 'I know it,' she snatched the letter. 'It should not be sent, but I must know what it is to send it.' Why don't you put it on the wire and send it just as it is?' she asked. 'I told her what was the matter, and she took her message from the messenger. 'That woman had written about two hundred words in her message, and was astonished when I told her what it would cost. She said she always thought it was the proper thing to place the message in a note and pay twenty cents for sending it. She always received her messages in an envelope. I explained to her that a message of ten words cost twenty-five cents and she said 'I will work for five days to pay for the cost of the message.' 'Then it should not be sent, but I must know what it is to send it.' Why don't you put it on the wire and send it just as it is?' she asked. 'Then it should not be sent, but I must know what it is to send it.' Why don't you put it on the wire and send it just as it is?' she asked. 'I told her what was the matter, and she took her message from the messenger. 'That woman had written about two hundred words in her message, and was astonished when I told her what it would cost. She said she always thought it was the proper thing to place the message in a note and pay twenty cents for sending it. She always received her messages in an envelope. I explained to her that a message of ten words cost twenty-five cents and she said 'I will work for five days to pay for the cost of the message.' 'Then it should not be sent, but I must know what it is to send it.' Why don't you put it on the wire and send it just as it is?' she asked.
